A YAWN OPENS CONVENTION

Holding his characteristic cigar, AFL-CIO president George Meany yawns during opening ceremonies today of the union's national convention in Miami Beach. Meany, 79, later said President Nixon's administration has "lost the moral authority" to lead the nation. Meany announced in August he was breaking tradition and not inviting the President and the labor secretary to address the convention.

Doyle Drive Widening Runs Into Opposition

Few Support State Eight-Lane Project

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — A $17 million state plan to widen the southern approach to the Golden Gate Bridge to prevent head-on collisions ran into stiff opposition last night.

Federal and state legislators county supervisors, neighborhood, civic and environmental organizations and a host of citizens condemned the plan variously as a desecration of the Presidio of San Francisco, a waste of money that should be spent instead on transit and part of a plot to push a freeway through the city. All opposed the planned eight-lane project, most arguing six would be adequate.

Those who spoke in its defense, outnumbered 6-1 in the five-hour hearing at Fireman's Fund Auditorium, consisted only of the chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors, Arnold M. Baptiste, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, the parents of a teen-age girl killed on the narrow roadway, a Burlingame man who insisted it should be 10 lanes, and a Tiburon man.

The hearing was not expected to change the plan by the state Transportation Department, but presumably the heavy record of opposition will be presented to the secretary of the Army when he considers approving the environmental impact report on the project.

If the environmental report survives review at lower Army levels and gets to the secretary, a court challenge will be made claiming it is inadequate, the Independent-Journal was told by Amy Meyer of People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

The only other approval needed before work can begin, perhaps next year, will be by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission.

More than 300 persons overflowed the auditorium when the hearing began at 7 p.m., and about 75 still were hanging on when the question-and-answer period began shortly after midnight.

The project calls for replacing the present six 10-foot-wide lanes with eight 12-foot-wide lanes and a concrete median barrier. The roadway, Doyle Drive, has been the scene of numerous accidents, the worst of which was one in July, 1970, in which 10 persons died.

Opponents of the project argued the tragedy was a fluke, and that removing it from the statistics made the mile-and-a-half approach safer than the average highway in the state.

The Marin commuter was branded as the villain in the alleged freeway plot. The tone for the long session was set by the first speaker, Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco.

"Why should San Francisco suffer in order to make it easier for suburbanites to commute from Marin County?" he asked rhetorically. "San Franciscans should not be placed in the position of having to see their streets, their neighborhoods and their environment devastated for the benefit of residents of another county," he declared.

Marks, who under redistricting plans before the Supreme Court no longer faces running next year in Marin, said the Marin commuter should bear the burden of longer travel time or "find other means of transportation to avoid the delay."

Vowing to "continue to protect our city," Marks sat down to a 30-second ovation from the crowd.

San Francisco Supervisor Dianne Feinstein opposing "turning Doyle Drive into an eight-lane freeway," noted that San Franciscans have been fighting freeways for more than a decade.

Supervisor John L. Molinari objected the state never studied a six-lane roadway, and called its attitude "stubborn."

Other elected officials protesting the project either in person or through spokesmen were Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Fifth District; Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco, candidate for governor; and Assemblymen Willie L. Brown Jr., Leo McCarthy, John F. Foran, and John Burton, all D-San Francisco, and Ken Meade, D-Oakland, chairman of the Assembly Transportation Commit-

Israel Push Into Egypt May Decide War Outcome

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel carried the war into Egypt today in a series of epic tank and artillery battles on both sides of the Suez Canal in which it reported destroying another 110 tanks and 20 planes in what could be the decisive battle of the war.

With Israel claiming air superiority Egypt was reported using North Korean pilots in combat.

In Washington the White House said today President Nixon is engaged in delicate negotiations to end the Mideast war and is optimistic about the possibilities of a cease-fire.

Gerald L. Warren, deputy White House press secretary, said that Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were intensifying contacts with Arab and Israeli leaders and with the big powers to try to end the fighting as quickly as possible.

"We are in delicate diplomatic negotiations at this time," said Warren. "Secretary Kissinger is in contact with the parties to the conflict and the other powers."

But Warren added that "nothing useful would be served by my commenting" on the negotiations.

Official communiques in Cairo said Israel had suffered heavy losses and that Israeli combat units which infiltrated across the Bitter Lakes region at the lower end of the canal had been surrounded and ordered "to surrender or face destruction."

The victorious Israeli account was in sharp contrast to the Cairo claim. Israel said it had destroyed more than 400 tanks in three Sinai battles this week and that Israeli tanks and artillery were pouring into Egypt on pontoon bridges across the Suez Canal. Egypt was reported originally to have 1,000 tanks in the Sinai.

"We are now calling the tune," Lt. Gen. David Elazar, the Israeli chief of staff, said on a television broadcast before results of the Thursday battles were reported. "Our superiority is clear and things are going well. But ending the war may take time."

An Israeli military spokesman giving the latest situation report in the battle for the Sinai said that during the night and this morning the task force which crossed to the west bank of the Canal had been reinforced and "continues to operate in the central region."

He said it included artillery as well as armor and "continues to perform and realize its missions against concentrations of artillery, antiaircraft batteries, missile command posts, installations and infantry units."

"The enemy forces tried during the day to counterattack our forces on the other side and on this side of the Sinai Peninsula. During these battles all the counterattacks were broken and around 110 tanks were destroyed."

Military observers in Tel Aviv said Israel appeared racing against time to try to knock out the Egyptian army before

Kosygin Is Reported Conferring In Cairo

MOSCOW (UPI) —Diplomatic sources said today Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin has been in Cairo since Tuesday for urgent consultations on the Middle East war with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt.

There was no immediate indication of how long Kosygin would remain in the Egyptian capital.

Kosygin was last seen in Moscow early Tuesday when he appeared unexpectedly at the government guest house of the visiting Danish prime minister to say goodby and apologize for having to break two key appointments with him, the sources said.

There had been strong indications since then that Kosygin flew to Cairo for talks with Egyptian leaders, and the sources today confirmed it.

(Yesterday in Washington, the State Department said Russia and the United States were working together on a possible Middle East peace resolution to be submitted to the United Nations, but there was little elaboration on the plan.)

Kosygin called off a meeting with Danish Prime Minister Anker Joergensen and failed to attend a dinner the Dane gave in his honor last night. Nor was he present to greet North Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong and Canadian Commerce Minister Alistair Gillespie was told Kosygin would not be able to see him today, according to Canadian sources.

Asked why Kosygin had failed to keep the appointment with him, Joergensen said: "He has been very busy. I cannot say more."

Joergensen is the first Western politician to speak to the Kremlin leaders face to face since the war broke out. He spent more than three hours with Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Joergensen told a news conference Wednesday that the Soviet leaders told him they do not want to see the destruction of Israel.

"THE Soviet Union voted for the Israeli state (at its inception) and still will be in favor of the existence of the Israeli state," he said.

Joergensen said he and the Soviets agreed the war must be stopped and that the Soviet Union and the United States bear special responsibility for stopping it.

The prime minister said that for the Soviets, "The aggressor is Israel."

"I held the point of view that the problem is more complicated," he said.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, has openly said for the first time since the war began that it is giving the Arabs military aid, although it did not say how much or what kind.

Until now, Soviet media have mentioned only U.S. aid to the Israelis.

Doyle Drive Funds Are Earmarked

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Several million dollars were earmarked yesterday for the controversial widening of the Doyle Drive approach to Golden Gate Bridge as a record $929.8 million was budgeted for spending next fiscal year by the state Division of Highways.

The huge spending program adopted by the California Highway Commission for 1974-75 also includes money for two other programs: $840,000 for modernizing lighting on Highway 101 for 3.8 miles from the bridge to the north end of the Waldo Grade tunnel and $480,000 for a 1.6-mile frontage road along 101 in Novato from Atherton Avenue to Airport Road.

The lighting project, like the Doyle Drive widening project, was reserved in a contingency fund, its actual use depending on approval of the projects by the Environmental Protection agency upon review of environmental impact reports.

If approved by the EPA, Doyle Drive will be widened from six to eight lanes, divided by a concrete barrier in the six-foot-wide median extending 1.5 miles between Baker Street and the Toll Plaza.

The cost is estimated at $11.9 million, with $9.7 million budgeted for fiscal 1975-76.

Casals Is Reported Battling For Life

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Cellist Pablo Casals, 96, battling for his life against lung complications and failing kidneys following a heart attack, spent an easy night and was in "critical but stable condition" today.

Auxilio Mutuo (Mutual Aid) hospital reported that the Catalonian maestro was semiconscious this morning but still enjoying "intervals of lucidity."

Byrd Pilot Dies

MT. KISCO, N.Y. (AP) — Bernt Balchen, who piloted Admiral Richard Byrd's first flight over the South Pole in 1929, died today at a Northern Westchester Hospital here after a long illness. He would have been 74 on Tuesday.

Female Con Artists Clip Elderly San Rafael Woman

Two female con artists who have bilked Bay Area residents for the past two years struck again in San Rafael yesterday and swindled a 63-year-old San Rafael woman of $2,400.

Police said the elderly victim was shopping in the Northgate shopping center about noon yesterday when a young woman approached, waved an envelope and sought directions to the city lost and found department.

Acting out the classic pigeon drop swindle, an accomplice came by and inquired about the item to be turned over to the city. The young woman said she had found a sealed envelope, but that postal authorities had not allowed her to turn it over because of an incorrect address.

The first woman said she was bonded and worked for an attorney and so couldn't open the envelope. The accomplice then opened it and claimed it contained $40,000 and a letter addressed to someone in Cuba, explaining the money represented gambling winnings, police said.

The young woman departed, saying she would consult her attorney about the find, then returned and reported that the three could share the money if each provided $2,600 to form a "straw corporation".

One of the swindlers accompanied the elderly woman to her home, where she obtained $2,400 in cash and later turned it over to the pair in a local restaurant, police reported. The two women disappeared after providing the victim with the name of a nonexistent attorney, according to officers.

One of the swindlers is described as about 26 years old, five feet, four inches tall, 125 pounds, with brown hair and eyes.

The other is described as about 50 years old, five feet, six inches tall, 130 pounds, with grey hair, blue eyes, high cheek bones and a smooth complexion.

San Rafael police said the two are the same team that bilked another San Rafael woman of $500 last August at the shopping center in a similar scheme.

Two women who tried to swindle a Fairfax woman by using the scheme Oct. 5, also at the Northgate shopping center, failed after the resident became suspicious according to officers.

Police said the two women have worked throughout the Bay Area over the past two years, but have never been arrested.

Court Rule In Tax Plan Held Legal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle J. Younger today issued a formal opinion declaring that a court could rule in favor of Gov. Ronald Reagan in a controversy over whether his tax limit plan would force a $620 million cut in projected state spending. Reagan said he was very pleased with the legal opinion.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post has predicted passage of the Nov. 6 ballot initiative would force the 1974-75 state budget to be $620 million less than it otherwise would be. Reagan vehemently has denied it.

While stating a court could uphold Reagan's position, Younger said "it would be premature to predict now the outcome" of such a legal test.

The controversy, which is highly complex but crucial to the initiative, centers on whether the governor could count surplus funds returned to taxpayers through sales and income tax cuts as revenue during the 1973-74 fiscal year.

If the initiative passes, the current fiscal year's revenue would become the base upon which future state spending would be determined. The lower the base, the lower the spending.

Younger said the Ecoomic Estimates Commission, which would be created under the initiative, would have wide authority in deciding exactly what the revenue base should be. And he predicted a court would uphold the commission's finding.

The commission would be comprised of the governor's finance director, the state controller and an appointee of the legislature. Currently, the finance director and controller would be expected to side with the governor.

Judge Denies Mitchell Request For Specific White House Tapes

NEW YORK (UPI) —A federal judge today denied a request by former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell for all White House tape recordings and records that may have a bearing on his conspiracy trial.

Judge Lee Gagliardi, however, directed federal prosecutors to indicate to him by next Tuesday whether there are any specific White House tapes involving the government's prospective witnesses.

If there are such records, Gagliardi said, he wants them turned over to him for private study to determine if they are relevant to the issue in the trial scheduled to start Tuesday.

If the government refuses to comply, Gagliardi said, the prospective witnesses would then be barred from testifying at the trial in Manhattan federal court.

Mitchell's co-defendant, former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, had joined in the defense subpoena for the White House tape recordings and records.

The prospective government witnesses included, former legal Aide John W. Dean III, President Nixon's two brothers, Donald and Edward, and former White House domestic affairs adviser John Ehrlichman.

Gagliardi quashed the subpoena calling on the President to produce all tape recordings and records concerning meetings and conversations among Nixon, his aides and Harry L. Sears, a prominent New Jersey Republican who is a codefendant in the case to be tried later.

The subpoena called for the records in the period between November 1971 and January 1973.

This subpoena, Gagliardi said, was "overbroad and clearly a fishing expedition."

Growth Rate Of Economy Reported On The Upswing

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The growth rate of the U. S. economy perked up slightly in late summer and inflation slowed, the Commerce Department reported today.

The nation's economy, as measured by the Gross National Product, expanded by 3.6 per cent between July and September. This followed a growth rate of nearly 9 per cent in the January-March quarter that plunged to only 2.4 per cent in April-June.

The modest third quarter recovery brings the "real" —or noninflated —growth rate within the 4 per cent range that the government considers ideal for long range noninflationary growth.

Inflation continued to climb at a historically high rate in the third quarter. The price level rose 6.7 per cent, a slight improvement over the second quarter's 7.3 per cent performance that was the highest price surge since 1951.

GNP measures the value of the total output of goods and services and is the broadest measure of the economy's health.

Jet Hijacker Reportedly Foiled

MARSEILLE, France (UPI) —A young woman armed with a rifle and pistol hijacked an Air France jetliner with 110 passengers today and forced it to land at Marseille airport. Police officers disguised as stewards boarded the plane and shot and seriously wounded her.

Police said the woman, who described herself as a pacifist, took over the Paris-Nice flight 409 and demanded the Boeing 727 fly to Cairo.

When the pilot told her the plane did not have enough fuel to reach Cairo, she agreed to a landing at Marseille.

Economics And Literature Nobel Prizes Are Awarded

STOCKHOLM (UPI) —Harvard University Prof. Wassily Leontief won the 1973 Nobel Prize for economics today for his "input-output" theory used to predict national economic changes. The Literature Prize was awarded to Australian Patrick White because he "introduced a new continent into literature."

WASSILY LEONTIEF
Input-output theory

Leontief, 67, won the equivalent of $122,000 for his development of the economic theory that was first used in the United States after World War II to study the effect on the economy of national disarmament and the scrapping of war materials. The same method is used by the Soviet Union for its five-year economic plans and has been employed in more than 50 industralizied nations.

In Cambridge, Mass, Leontief said, "I'm very pleased." He said he had started developing the theory when he first went to Harvard in 1951.

For the coveted literature award, The Academy of Letters cited White "for an epic and psychological art which has introduced a new continent into literature."

The Academy said White made his name with "The Tree of Man" which it described as "an epically broad and psychologically discerning account of a part of Australian social development, in the form of two peoples' long life together and struggle against outward and inward difficulties."

It said his last two books, "The Vivisector" and "Eye of the Storm" were among his greatest feats, both as to size and to frenzied building up of tension."

The Academy said White, 61, who lives in Sydney, showed "unbroken creative power, an ever deeper restlessness and seeking urge, an onslaught against vital problems that have never ceased to engage him and a wrestling with the language in order to extract all its power and all its nuances to the verge of the unattainable.

"White's literary production has failings that belong to a great and bold writing, exceeding as it does different kinds of conventional limits," the Academy's citation said.

Leontief was cited "for the development of the input-output method and for its application to important economic problems.

The Swedish academy said, "Professor Leontief is the sole and unchallenged creator of the input-output technique. This important innovation has given to economic science an empirically useful method to highlight the general interdependence in the production system of a society."

The input-output analysis describes the interdependence in a production system as a network of deliveries between the various sectors of production. It is used extensively in forecasting and planning for the short run and long run.

The academy said one of its advantages is its use in different types of economic systems —decentralized market economies with mainly private enterprise as well as centrally planned economies dominated by public ownership.

Leontief was born in Leningrad, the Soviet Union, on Aug. 5, 1906. He received his PhD in economics in Berlin in 1928 and became professor in economics at Harvard University in 1946. In 1939 he founded the Harvard Economic Research Project, of which he is still a director.

TWO RESIGN OVER PEACE PRIZE PICKS

OSLO (UPI) — Two members of the Norwegian Nobel Peace Prize committee resigned today in protest against the award of this year's prize to U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnamese politburo member Le Duc Tho.

Helge Rognliden, chairman of the Liberal party, and Helge Hovdhagen, a former Center party representative, told parliament that they thought the committee's choice was a serious mistake.

This was the first time any member of the Nobel Committee so openly disagreed with its choice.

Wealthy Nixon Associate Is Given A Clean Check

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox said today he has found "no evidence of any improper conduct" in the dropping of an antitrust investigation involving a firm owned by Robert H. Abplanalp, a close friend of President Nixon.

In a four-sentence letter to Rep. Bertram Podell, D-N.Y., Cox said he had conducted a "thorough investigation," relying in part on the FBI but had turned up nothing.

"No evidence of any improper conduct has been found," Cox said in the letter, which was dated Oonday and released today. "Accordingly, we contemplate no further action."

Podell, who had suggested there might have been a link between Abplanalp's helping Nixon buy his San Clemente, Calif., home and and the Justice Department's decision not to pursue an antitrust investigation of Abplanalp's Precision Valve Corp., was caustic in his response.

"How comforting it is that suspicions can be put to rest that there was favoritism shown a man who loaned the President $625,000 to buy a home, put an investment company together to buy most of that property back, canceled out the President's personal indebtedness, made large contributions to the President's political campaign, donated the use of his resort home and otherwise made considerable resources available for presidential use," Podell said.

Last July, Podell obtained and turned over to Cox what he described as Justice Department files indicating that the antitrust division had begun an investigation in June 1969, into the pricing practices of Precision Valve.

An aide to Podell said the file showed the investigation was pushed vigorously by federal prosecutors in New York City and had been approved through channels until February 1971, when he said prosecutors were ordered by superiors in Washington to "close out" the inquiry.

Higher U.S. Bond Rate Is Sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz proposed today that Congress remove the 5.5 per cent interest ceiling on U.S. savings bonds and allow the rate to float upward with market conditions.

Shultz made the request in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, which is holding hearings on legislation to increase the U.S. debt ceiling.

Shultz called for an increase in the present $465 billion debt ceiling to $480 billion, $5 billion less than the administration proposed last June.

Budget Director Roy Ash told the committee that a balanced budget was not only achievable but necessary to fight the "continuing threat of inflation."

Shultz said that redemptions of savings bonds—$60 billion of the national debt—are beginning to exceed sales because investors can get higher rates of return on other investments, and "without a fair rate, this experience will deteriorate further."

While the present rate ceiling on savings bonds is limited to 5.5 per cent, rates are higher at many banks, savings and loans, and other similar investment opportunities—in some cities bank interest rates are up to 9.5 per cent.

"I believe the most straightforward approach for the Congress to this problem would be simply to remove the ceiling on savings bonds rates, to provide in this area the same flexibility that we have for marketable securities of equivalent maturity," Shultz said.

Krogh Denies Giving False Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Egil "Bud" Krogh Jr., former presidential aide who headed the White House "plumbers," pleaded innocent today to two counts of giving false testimony before the Watergate grand jury.

After an eight-minute arraignment, U. S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell released Krogh, 34, on his personal recognizance.

Krogh resigned as transportation undersecretary in May after acknowledging he had responsibility for a break-in by his "plumbers" of the office of the Beverly Hills psychiatrist of Pentagon Papers defendent Daniel Ellsberg.

Gesell indicated he hoped to set trial for Krogh, indicted on charges of lying before the original Watergate grand jury, some time in November.

Krogh was indicted by the second Watergate grand jury last Thursday in connection with testimony he had given about the travels of two other members of the "plumbers," E. Howard Hunt Jr. and G. Gordon Liddy.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

On Aug. 28, 1972, Krogh was asked by the first grand jury whether he was aware of trips to California by Hunt and Liddy.

"No," Krogh testified several times.

Liddy was found guilty and Hunt pleaded guilty last January as masterminds of the break-in and bugging of the Democratic national offices in the Watergate complex June 17, 1972.

Later, Liddy was indicted by a Los Angeles County grand jury for helping plan the Ellsberg break-in, and Hunt was given immunity for his testimony about it.

The "plumbers" was the nickname given the White House Special Investigations Unit established in 1971.

Clean Air Is Said Impossible Unless Power Plants Clean Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Russell Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told electric company officials today that it will be impossible to meet clean air standards on time unless the utilities act immediately to clean up their power plants.

Air pollution control "remains among the nation's most urgent priority," Train said in opening an 11-day EPA hearing on the electric utility industry.

He said coal-fired power plants, the largest single source of sulfur oxide emissions, spewed out nearly 16 million tons of the pollutant into the air in 1972. He said high levels of sulfur oxides result in respiratory diseases as well as corrosion of metals and damage to plants and trees.

Train said he was "concerned that many plants are not moving forward with programs to achieve compliance" with standards that have already been in existence for more than a year.

"I am convinced that unless a real commitment to comply with sulfur emission requirements is made by the electric utility industry in the immediate future, it will be impossible to achieve our primary health related air quality standards anywhere near the 1975-77 time frame established by Congress," Train said.

He said the issue has a special urgency because of the nation's energy problems. If adequate control devices, called "scrubbers," can be installed in power plant chimneys, he said, those plants can burn coal with a high sulfur content that they would otherwise not be able to use.

"Therefore I consider it of urgent importance to meeting our nation's energy needs that the electric utility industry make the necessary management decisions now to move ahead aggressively with the installation of stack gas scrubbing technology," Train added.

During the course of the hearings, the EPA will take testimony from several electric companies and producers of anti-pollution equipment.

Also called to testify were three companies which the EPA on September 13 had said were already violating the sulfur oxide provisions of the Clean Air Act. They are the Northern Indiana Public Service Co., Gary, Ind., The Public Service Company of Indiana, Terre Haute, Ind., and the West Pennsylvania Power Co., Courtney, Pa.

Wrongs Charged By Campaigners

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The General Accounting Office yesterday accused workers for the McGovern campaign in Massachusetts of apparently violating four federal election laws last year, including failure to report at least $54,000 in receipts.

The GAO said in a report sent to the Justice Department that the campaign also failed to itemize receipts in excess of $100, totalling $66,675 and to report a $50,000 expenditure in partial payment of a $75,000 loan.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Storm Warning

MIAMI (UPI) — The Cuban meteorological institute early today issued warnings around the Gulf of Guacanayabo for a possible landfall of strengthening tropical storm Gilda.

The National Hurricane Center said the intensifying storm could hit the eastern portion of Cuba's Camaguey Province, or western Oriente Province at near hurricane strength tonight.

Post Office Hit

BELFAST (UPI) — Guerrillas firebombed the Londonderry post office yesterday and robbers shot the postmaster in the County Fermanagh village of Derrylin, then blew up the town's general store and post office.

A Post Office spokesman said two bombs planted by five armed men in the Londonderry post office caused an explosion and fire that gutted the building. He said there were no injuries.

Police in Derrylin said Postmaster Joseph Hall was shot in the leg by raiders armed with machine guns.

Comet Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency said today it will use telescopes on the ground, in the air and in space in an extraordinary effort to examine the great comet Kohoutek when it approaches earth in late December and early January.

Kohoutek is expected to be more spectacular than the amed Haley's comet which made its last appearance in 1910. Astronomers expect the new comet to be as bright as a full moon with a tail stretching across one-sixth of the night sky on New Year's Day.

Probably the most important objective of scientists will be to see whether or not comets have a solid nucleus.

Link Reopened

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government troops yesterda2y knocked out a rebel roadblock on Highway 4 and reopened the supply8route to7traffic, the high command reported today, restoring Phnom Penh's vital land link with the7sa.

Comm1andspokesman Col. Am Rong said Cambodian soldiers cleared the area 92 miles southwest of Phnom Penh where an insurgent roadblock 42 miles from the Kompong Som seaport had halted north and southbound truck convoys since Tuesday.

Regents Object

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The regents of the University of California, trustees of a $456 million stock portfolio, have rejected a proposal to weigh the social responsibility of a firm before investing in it.

The issue was presented by UC President Charles J. Hitch who recommended the Regents' Committee on Investments consider the social policy of a company.

Hitch also said the committee, which holds its debates in private, should open discussions of company policy to representatives of the faculty and students.

Regent Dean A. Watkins said throwing the meetings open "would allow pressure groups to come in and lobby the regents on the social responsibility of companies."

Hits Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite recent drops in wholesale cattle and hog prices, supermarkets have been fattening their profit margins instead of cutting beef and pork prices, according to Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

Speaking to the National Association of Food Chains annual convention yesterday, Butz conceded that the adjustment of meat prices is "no simple matter" because retailers reduced their price spreads earlier when uncontrolled live animal prices pushed up against ceilings on wholesale and retail meat.

Timber Imports?

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Bert Cole, land commissioner for Washington State, predicted yesterday that the United States soon would be importing timber products from the Soviet Union.

Castro Said The Rescuer Of Captured Ambassador

MIAMI (UPI) — Havana Radio today credited Premier Fidel Castro with rescuing the Belgian ambassador, held captive in the French Embassy in the Cuban capital by a kidnaper demanding passage to the United States.

The broadcast, monitored in Miami, said the bearded Communist leader "penetrated the embassy to rescue" the ambassador. There were no details, but earlier reports said Castro had personally supervised the kidnaper's capture.

The radio said the French and Belgian ambassadors "expressed solidarity" with Castro's handling of the matter.

Wednesday night, the Foreign Ministry in Brussels said Havana police freed the ambassador earlier in the day by shooting and wounding the kidnaper.

The Foreign Ministry said the ambassador, Jean Somerhausen, was unharmed in the ordeal.

A ministry spokesman said police intervened while the French ambassador, Pierre Anthonioz, negotiated Somerhausen's release with Cuban authorities.

The spokesman said Anthonioz also had been taken as a hostage, but was released when an unidentified member of his staff agreed to take his place.

In Paris, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said the French ambassador was "safe and sound," but there was no word on the fate of his replacement.

The British Embassy in Havana relayed news of Somerhausen's release to the Belgian Foreign Ministry, the ministry spokesman said.

He said he had no further details of the action by Cuban police, other than that they freed the Belgian diplomat after shooting and wounding his abductor.

The kidnaper, a Cuban identified as Miguel de la Paz, seized Somerhausen Tuesday.

Land Offered To Tiburon By Developer

The Sequoia Pacific development firm has offered to give the Tiburon Sanitary District land for expansion of its treatment plant as part of a proposed development plan for downtown Tiburon.

James Murray, president of the district board, said Philip K. Buskirk of Tiburon, architect for the developer, told him last week the firm would give the district a strip of Mar West Street, about 200 feet long, which lies in front of the sanitary district treatment plant, located at the corner of that street and Paradise Drive.

Murray said he was not sure exactly how much land was involved in the offer and said it would be discussed at a sanitary district meeting Nov. 5.

He said Buskirk did not indicate where the developer planned to reroute the end of Mar West.

Sequoia Pacific is a general partner of Southern Pacific Railroad, which has extensive holdings of downtown property it hopes to develop. A plan for this land is tentatively set to be presented to the city planning commission next week. It supposedly follows the outline of a downtown plan adopted by Tiburon three years ago, but its details have not been disclosed.

Crucial to the plan's success are sewerage connections for the project.

According to Murray, the board had told Sequoia Pacific before that it could not grant these connections unless the developer pays for a study on the sanitary district to handle the development or would have to expand its plant to do so.

The district has little land left for such expansion.

Murray said Buskirk has indicated the developer did not expect the sewer connections in return for the land.

Murray will recommend the board table the offer until the developer completed the development plan and the study requested by the sanitary district.

Buskirk could not be reached for comment on the offer.

PRESS PROTECTION — Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson briefed newsmen on another matter this morning after setting down Justice Department guidelines that prohibit the issuance of a subpoena for newsmen without his permission. (UPI Telephoto)

Richardson Protects Press From Subpoena

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson issued guidelines for Justice Department officials today, requiring his permission before subpoenas can be issued to journalists or before newsmen are arrested in connection with their press activities.

The same authority will apply to requests for arrest warrants or requests for testimony by newsmen before a grand jury, the guidelines said.

"Because freedom of the press can be no broader than the freedom of reporters to investigate and report the news, the prosecutorial power of the government should not be used in such a way that it impairs a reporter's responsibility to cover as broadly as possible controversial public issues," Richardson's order said.

The guidelines deal with two controversial areas which have arisen in the Nixon administration. One erupted over subpoenas issued to reporters and news organizations, and the other involved two arrests.

One was a Boston Globe reporter, Thomas Oliphant, involved in an airlift of supplies to Indians at Wounded Knee, S.D.; the other was Les Whitten, who works with columnist Jack Anderson, in connection with documents stolen from the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Richardson's subpoena guidelines said: "No Justice Department official shall request or make arrangements for a subpoena to any member of the news media without the express authorization of the attorney general.

"If a subpoena is obtained without authorization, the department will — as a matter of course — move to quash the subpoena without prejudice to its rights subsequently to request the subpoena upon the proper authorization."

The guidelines said the Justice Department should make "reasonable attempts" to get information from other sources and that lawyers should negotiate with the media before seeking subpoenas.

"No member of the department," the guidelines said, "shall subject a member of the news media to questioning as to any offense which he is suspected of having committed in the course of, or arising out of, the coverage or investigation of a news story, without the express authority of the attorney general."

Opposition also came from the Superintendent of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, William J. Whalen of Mill Valley. He said the project would increase traffic through the Marina, interfering with access to recreation areas.

Joining the opposition were the San Francisco Bay Chapter of the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth and Northern California Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

These and other organizations objected the project would consume 15 acres of open space, destroy 1,300 trees and shrubs, increase noise and air pollution, disrupt wildlife and be ugly. Thirty-six persons testified against the plan.

Speaking for it, Baptiste said "I somehow wish this hearing was in Marin County." He stressed that the existing roadway already works as an eight-lane highway because the rubber tubes dividing traffic are moved to provide four lanes in the direction of peak travel. To create a six-lane freeway would tie up traffic twice a day, he said.

An eight-lane freeway also would give room for an exclusive bus lane on the other side of the barrier from peak traffic, he noted.

John Abraham, a San Francisco businessman whose teenage daughter was among the 10 youths killed in the 1970 tragedy, said elected officials opposing the widening should be tried for the death of anyone else killed on the roadway.

The evident hostility aimed at Marin commuters was too much for Mack Nicolaysen, a Tiburon engineer. He warned San Franciscans were "highly mistaken" if they expected Marinites to take their business to them'if you treat us like dogs."

Commuters are "not aliens that ought to be kept out as much as possible," he said, adding "you don't care anything about the living if they live north of the Golden Gate Bridge."

The record will remain open through Oct. 31 for written statements to Thomas R. Lammers, district director of transportation, P.O. Box 3366, Rincon Annex, San Francisco 94119.

Tiburon Plan To Be Discussed

The status of the Tiburon downtown plan will be discussed tonight at 8 o'clock at a meeting of the Council of Tiburon Homeowner Associations at the home of Robert Peterson at 510 Ridge Road.

Donald L. Batten, council president, announced that a representative of the Tiburon Peninsula Advisory Committee would present that group's position on the city-approved downtown plan and a massive development project considered for the downtown area by Southern Pacific Railroad.

The council includes representatives of 10 homeowners' associations in the city.

Tentative Nod To Two Changes

The Novato Unified School District board has tentatively agreed on two changes in policy governing the board of trustees.

To be prepared by staff for board adoption at a future meeting, the changes — decided on Tuesday night — declare the board an appeal board for problems in the district and permit it to change the order of business on the agenda, according to Supt. James G. Bunker.

The board held a closed meeting to consider bringing charges against a teacher, but took no action.

Fair Is Fair

SAN FRANCISCO(UPI) — Municipal Judge Harry Low agreed to a city government request that he crack down on corporations which do not pay traffic tickets on their vehicles — and then announced he would also crack down on city vehicles which have piled up a big backlog of unpaid fines.

such big powers as the United States and Soviet Union can impose a settlement.

The Israeli military spokesman reported further:

"During this day about 20 Egyptian planes were downed, three in the Mediterranean, most of the others in the Suez Canal area...(during) this day and night that passed a few Egyptian infantry units fought well and our forces had to fight them to overcome them."

"One of the enemy army units destroyed yesterday entered into an ambush south of the Great Bitter Lake. Most of their tanks were destroyed and three helicopters shot down nearby."

Asked whether the Israeli strike force had now become a permanent force across the canal, he said, "maybe at the end we can change its definition. Asked if the Israeli forces had crossed the canal by a bridge, he replied, "I would like to find out how an armored force crossed a canal otherwise."

Egypt said last night an Israeli task force in Egypt earlier this week had been annihilated but Israel insisted Thursday it was still there on a mission to destroy Egypt's deadly antiaircraft and SAM missile sites and reported widespread Israeli sabotage attacks by frogmen, commandos, missile boats and planes in the harbors of Egypt.

An Egyptian communique on today's fighting said the Israelis tried all Wednesday night and this morning to infiltrate through the Bitter Lakes into Egypt and that they did so on a "limited front" to carry out harassing operations against Egyptian forces.

"Our forces are now surrounding the enemy and have called on him either to surrender or to face destruction," the Cairo communique said.

In Washington, the U.S. Defense Department said some North Korean fighter pilots are in Egypt and flew combat missions against Israeli planes "within the last 24 hours." He said neither the Israelis nor the North Koreans suffered any casualties during a brief aerial battle.

"It is believed that about 30 North Korean pilots have been operating MIG21s in Egypt since before the hostilities began," the Pentagon said. "It looks like the first (North Korean-Israeli) engagement occurred within the last 24 hours.

"There were some shots exchanged, but there were no planes shot down on either side."

Both the United States and the Soviet Union were pouring arms to Israel and to the Arabs and U.S. officials said the Soviet airlift to Egypt and Syria had picked up slightly since yesterday, with about 6,500 tons of war material sent by the Russians so far.

They said a "sizeable number" of Soviet bloc ships were involved and that within the next few days Israeli-owned or chartered ships were expected to begin carrying additional heavy water material, most likely tanks and bombs from U.S. east coast ports to Israel.

Burglar Termed A Drug Addict

A convicted burglary has been declared a drug addict and will be referred to the California Medical Facility at Vacaville for treatment.

Marin Superior Court Judge David Menary Jr. made the ruling Monday in the case of Richard Anthony Weaver, 20, of Oakland.

Weaver was one of two Oakland men arrested on suspicion of burglarizing a Los Ranchitos home June 21. He was convicted by a superior court jury, but the panel was unable to agree on the guilt of John Robert Prater, 35. A retrial is scheduled for the week of Oct. 29.

A brother of Weaver, Larry Lee Weaver, is being sought on a $10,000 warrant in connection with the burglary.

No Protest Heard Against Dock Plan

There has been no protest against the Commodore Properties of San Francisco plan to place fill, build a bulkhead and rebuild a dock at 240 Redwood Highway, north of Sausalito, the Army Corps of Engineers reported today.

The permit application has been forwarded by the corps to the Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, for review.

Odd Object Is Sighted Over Novato

An object, described as a ball with pulsating red and green lights, was sighted over Novato last night.

The unidentified pulsating object, which hovered above the western horizon, was seen about 8 p.m. by several residents, including a police officer. Donald E. Peterson, of 3 Hune Court, said he and his wife and children and several neighbors watched it for about an hour.

He described the UFO as round with a point on one side. It had a light in the middle which changed from green to red and pulsated, tending to fade and then get brighter, according to Peterson.

After Peterson notified police, officer James Lee spotted the object. He reported it looked like an aircraft with running lights.

Petersen said the UFO hovered over treetops west of the city for more than an hour, then finally appeared to drop over the horizon.

Briefs On Beer Strike To Be Filed

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — National Labor Relations Board and Teamsters Union lawyers will submit briefs and proposed findings in U.S. District Court tomorrow, on whether the teamsters will be found guilty of secondary boycott activity during the long-drawn beer truck drivers' strike in Northern California.

Judge Charles B. Renfrew probably will decide late next week, on the contempt action brought by the labor board Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, labor board officials said, they still are attempting to unravel challenges against ballots cast in the union decertification election the board held Sept. 26, to see whether Local 888 would continue to represent drivers employed by liquor and beer distributors in Marin and throughout Northern California. The drivers went on strike June 26.

The election results cannot be decided until the challenges are settled.

In the contempt action, NRLB attorneys last week presented affidavits to Judge Renfrew that truck tires were punctured and liquor store windows were broken during the strike. Local 888 and the Alameda Labor Council were named in the contempt action.

How to sell your home in a tight-money, and high interest-rate market.

With the real estate market today it takes a special kind of knowledge and sophistication to sell your home at the best possible terms.

Interest rates are constantly fluctuating. Sometimes changing from day to day. This situation may call for "creative financing" to handle your sale (or purchase) of property. The importance of knowing sources of money and ways of arranging private financing that safeguards the interests of both buyer and seller can hardly be overestimated.

When you deal with a Realtor; a member office of the Marin County Board of Realtors, you are in the best possible hands. They are professionals at finding alternative methods of buying or selling a home during a tight money market. Selling a home today is too complex to take any chances. Always work through a Realtor and you'll never be sorry.

MARIN COUNTY BOARD OF REALTORS

College Board Candidate Seeks More Involvement

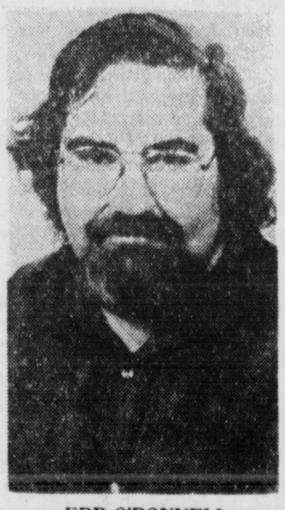

By BILL ROBERTS

(First of a series of stories on the eight candidates for a vacancy on the Marin Community College District Board)

Edd O'Donnell, a counselor with the postal service program for alcoholic recovery, is seeking election to the Marin Community College District Board to bring more community involvement to the board.

O'Donnell is one of eight candidates seeking a vacant seat created when Elizabeth M. Deedy resigned to accept a state position.

The 29-year-old O'Donnell formerly worked for the Ft. Lauderdale News and in the public relations department of Broward Community College in Ft. Lauderdale. He says experience has shown him that more community involvement with district boards is necessary.

EDD O'DONNELL
More community involvement

He said the board can only serve the community's needs if it knows what those needs are and he thinks the district board has been deficient in that area in the past.

O'Donnell said he favors an equal balance between vocational and college-transfer oriented courses and he would like to see more emphasis in social service fields.

He favors a review of the Indian Valley Colleges building plan in light of decreasing enrollment rates and would like to see the district do a better job of "selling" IVC to the public.

O'Donnell also backed the present committee systems at College of Marin which allows faculty to bypass administration in dealing with the board and supported the present faculty senate system.

He called the present adult education program in the district "one of the best I've seen," favors student participation in decision-making by setting up student committees directly responsible to the board and leaving ethnic study classes spread throughout departments rather than centralized in one department.

O'Donnell said he has no preference for either bond funding districtwide spending should be or tax overrides to pay for construction at IVC. He said district wide spending should be based on the review of IVC construction in view of the record budget passed by the board this year.

He also said the district's administrative system should allow for separate presidents at IVC and the College of Marin, with each answerable to the board.

O'Donnell is not married and lives at 860 Rincon Way in San Rafael.

Delay Asked In Maryland Agnew Probe

BALTIMORE (UPI) —U.S. Attorney George Beall wants state prosecutors to put off any investigation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew until he completes his own investigation of Maryland political corruption.

Beall, who headed the investigation that led to the resignation of Agnew last week, said yesterday he has asked state's attorneys in two counties to delay proposed investigations of Agnew's activities because he said the probes could result in "confusion and generally inhibit our work."

Beall said federal and state prosecutors would find themselves competing for the same material and witnesses.

Beall said he made the request when he was questioned by prosecutors from Baltimore County and Anne Arundel County last week. Agnew was Baltimore County's chief executive and later as Governor of Maryland came under the jurisdiction of Anne Arundel County.

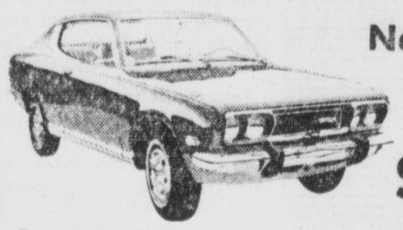

But Beall said Anne Arundel County State's Attorney Warren Duckett and Baltimore County State's Attorney Samuel A. Green gave no indication whether they intended to honor his request. Gov. Marvin Mandel and the state attorney general, Francis Burch, have already said they felt Agnew has suffered enough.

Duckett said he was dissatisfied with Agnew's speech this week concerning the investigation of his activities and said he has asked the county grand jury to consider a possible probe. Duckett has asked the grand jury to submit a report by next week.

Sonoma State Has Campus Paper Again

A newspaper to serve students at Sonoma State College has returned to campus after a two-year absence.

The Cal State Sonoma Key, an eight-page tabloid, will be published twice-monthly with the cooperation of the Rohnert Park News, a weekly serving the community.

Heading the student staff are Paul Lisky, a junior serving as editor; Robert Lassman, a freshman as managing editor, and Brian Quinn, a senior as feature editor.

The campus has been without a student paper since the Cossack Steppes folded two years ago when then-president Ambrose R. Nichols Jr. withdrew its funds. The newspaper drew heavy criticism when it featured slogans such as "Smash the State," used photographs of nudes for nudity's sake and liberally sprinkled four-letter words throughout stories.

The new publication receives no college funds and is being financed by News owner Paul Golis until advertising can make it self-supporting.

The first two editions have carried features on campus personalities, news of campus events, reviews and editorials including one criticising Gov. Ronald Regan for reducing the college budget.

"We have completely free reign on editorial policy," Quinn said. "We don't plan to avoid controversies, but we figure as long as we're objective we won't have problems."

Quinn said the four-letter words found in the last campus-oriented newspaper will be absent in the key. "We're trying to be as professional as possible," he said.

None of the students on the staff are receiving salaries, but some will get study credits for their work.

"We're doing this because students felt a need to have a voice in what goes on on campus," Quinn said.

College officials have reportedly been helpful to students and welcomed the student newspaper.

Quinn said the students have been meeting with officials on the possibility of assuming work on publishing the Sonoman, a weekly campus newsletter now published by the College public affairs office.

Assisting the students as advisers is a publishing board of representatives of four area newspapers. They include Art Volkerts, editor of the Santa Rosa Press Democrat; Jack Craemer, editor and co-publisher of the Independent-Journal; Val Hess, editor of the Petaluma Argus Courier; David Bolling, editor of the Santa Rosa News Herald; and Peter Golis, Press Democrat Reporter. Also serving on the advisory board are Lee Levinger, president of Levinger Advertising in Santa Rosa and Carl Campbell, college public affairs officer.

Plea Made By Owner Of Barge

The owner of a beached barge which has aroused the wrath of some Strawberry residents has pleaded innocent to a charge that he failed to get a county floating home permit.

Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court set a jury trial Oct. 25 for Scott Diamond, 26, who moved his converted dredge barge, The Golden Gate, to the Strawberry mudflats from Gate 5 in June.

Some residents immediately protested, claiming the weathered craft and others were harming the value of their homes and spoiling the serenity of the placid area.

Strawberry attorney Stephen H. Kaufmann sent a letter to the Marin Board of Supervisors yesterday protesting what he called "the proliferation of . . . floating shacks."

Violation of the county ordinance requiring floating home permits is punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

TIBURON TEMPEST OVER TOWER

This 28-foot radio tower complete with concrete pad and equipment housings appeared mysteriously recently on a Tiburon hilltop. City officials were shocked and neighbors were irate in the Mount Tiburon and Marinero areas. The repeater tower at 141 Sugarloaf Drive lacked city approval, and investigation revealed that Ken Terteling, owner of electronics and real estate businesses on the San Francisco Peninsula, built the tower as part of a private communications system for himself and his employees. Faced with the prospect that the city council might declare the tower a nuisance, Terteling's attorneys said yesterday that it would be down by the end of the week.

Plea Made For Bus Run For Handicapped

A state rehabilitation counselor today appealed to Marin County officials to restore an $18,000-a-year bus service that was used by about a dozen handicapped persons a week before it was canceled Monday.

Janet Pence of Mill Valley, a counselor at the Department of Rehabilitation office at Northgate Industrial Park, said the staff was unaware of the service cut until complaints came from several persons no longer able to get to Northgate.

Only scheduled service will do, she said, since private organizations that provide transportation to handicapped persons need at least four days' notice. Most persons who need to come to her office, however, have to do so on short notice because of job openings, she told the Independent-Journal.

The service was eliminated by the county's transit district to cut back deficits and prevent its operations from running out of funds during the fiscal year. Mrs. Pence said the office will take up the matter with the county.

She said the office was moved from downtown San Rafael in May because more space was needed. Most persons come by car, she noted, thus the move has improved access to the majority because parking is easier than it was downtown.

Robert Harrison, assistant general manager of the county's transit district, said that an average of fewer than four persons rode the canceled route on each trip. It ran from Fourth and Hetherton streets to Northgate Industrial Park via Northgate Shopping Center.

He estimated the route cost $18,000 a year to operate. It ran every half-hour midday on weekdays.

Thanksgiving Turkey May Cost Holiday Diners Dollar A Pound

MODESTO (AP) — Turkeys may be the only ones gobbling with glee this Thanksgiving if prices for the traditional bird soar to heights forecast by the California Turkey Federation.

This year's crop of some 18 million California-bred birds could cost as much as $1 a pound by late November, an increase of 30 cents a pound over turkey costs last year, the federation said yesterday.

Those prices are for frozen birds. Unfrozen ones would be even more expensive.

The reason for the dramatic increase is the higher cost of feed, said Henry Turner, manager of the Turkey Federation here. He also cited increased overhead in turkey ranch operations.

Because of higher feed costs, growers have been feeding birds less — this means turkeys will be lighter than in the past and suppermarkets will be offering twice as many 12 to 15 pound birds, rather than the usual 20-pound gobblers.

But even in the tace of the highest prices since 1948, growers do not think people will turn their backs on the bird which has graced so many holiday tables.

"It's still the best buy around," said Turner. "Pound for pound, the good old turkey gives you more protein than any other meat — and that's a fact."

Medication Needs Said Underplayed

PORTLAND (UPI) —A pharmaceutical executive describes the United States as having an "overdrugged and undermedicated society."

John J. Horan, senior vice president of Merck & Co., Inc., told the National Association of Retail Druggists here that while alerting the public to the serious problem of drug abuse and control of distribution, prescription pharmacists should also help create awareness of the needs of medication.

Larkspur To Tackle Energy Crisis

Larkspur city councilmen last night took the energy crisis to heart and indicated they think solutions can be found at the local level to help ease the anticipated energy pinch.

On a motion by Councilman William G. Fleckles, an energy conservation committee was created to examine the problem and suggest ways for energy conservation.

Fleckles will head the committee which will include councilman Neil R. Brixon, a member of the city staff to be named by Fleckles and Brixon, and two representatives of the Larkspur Chamber of Commerce.

Fleckles called the energy crisis a "realistic" situation which can be expected to worsen because of the war in the Middle East.

As an example of local action, Brixon recalled that in the early 1930s the city council ordered every other street light in the city turned off because it could not pay its power bill. He did not advocate that at this time.

Fleckles said that if every eighth streetlight in San Rafael were dimmed an energy saving could be realized without endangering public safety. He did not give examples of possible energy savings in Larkspur, however.

The committee will meet following appointment of the chamber of commerce representatives.

Bogota Quake

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A light earthquake shook Bogota this morning. Police reported no casualties or damage.

Connally Sees Energy Problem For Some Time

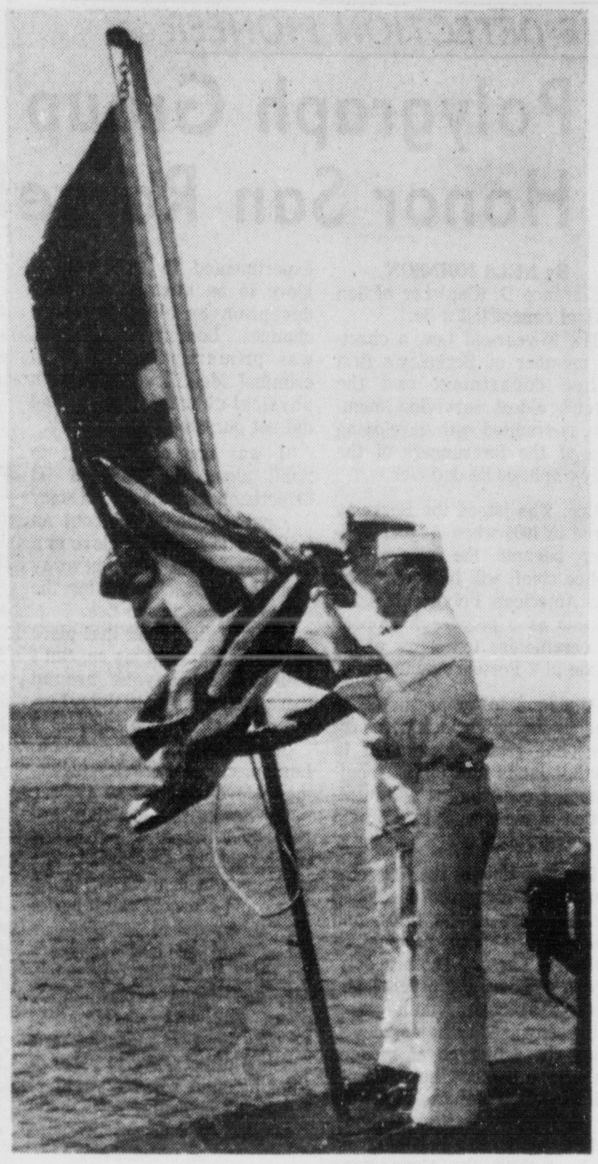

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally said yesterday the United States "can no longer unilaterally determine" the price of energy products.

"We must accept the fact that the United States is no longer alone at the top of the world economic ladder," he told the American Gas Association convention.

Connally said the energy crisis is going to remain a problem for several years.

He said one answer to the energy shortage is to "make some decisions on what we want and what we can have."

"For example," he told a news conference that followed, "we'll have to do without power for some activities using natural gas or keep those activities and use high-sulphur coal for energy."

END OF AN ERA

Seamen lower the stars and stripes from the submarine Amberback to herald the eventual closing of the 150-year-old Key West, Fla., Naval Station. During decommissioning ceremonies yesterday, the submarine was turned over to the Brazilian Navy.

Merchants' Window Signs — A Violation

A crackdown on merchants displaying paper signs in windows in violation of the Larkspur sign ordinance was ordered last night by the Larkspur City Council.

The council directed staff to renew enforcement of all provisions of the sign ordinance, but its action was clearly aimed at merchants who place paper signs on windows in violation of city ordinance.

Councilman Neil R. Brixon raised the issue, complaining that large businesses like Safeway have been escaping enforcement while small merchants recently had paper signs ordered removed from their windows.

Councilmen William G. Fleckles and Robert H. Lee also spoke in favor of stepped-up enforcement. Although no formal vote was taken, the council clearly split 3-to-1 (Mayor Alfred J. Malvino absent) in favor of more rigid enforcement.

Councilman Joan L. Sestak argued against full-scale enforcement because a new sign ordinance is being prepared by the council and citizens' committees. She also said enforcement would divert staff from other projects of higher priority.

John E. Roberto, city planning director, told the council that sign ordinance enforcement will divert staff from building inspections and work on placing city zoning ordinances in compliance with the city's proposed general plan.

The council also asked City Atty. Joseph A. Forest to advise it when abatement will be possible on larger signs which don't conform to the ordinance.

Councilmen were unsure about abatement time limits because the original sign ordinance, written in 1963, extended in 1966 and revised in 1968, allowed nonconforming signs to remain up for differing time limits.

The Larkspur City Council Also:

AWARD — Presented an award from the California State Automobile Association for 22 consecutive years without a pedestrian fatality in the city to Police Chief Howard H. Clark.

TAX — Adopted an ordinance conforming local sales and use tax ordinances to state law.

TENNIS — awarded a $33,566 contract to Bresnan-Dalecio Inc. of San Rafael for construction of four tennis courts in Piper Park, $30,000 more than estimated because of foundation changes. Only other bid was $36,221 of W. K. McClellan Co. of San Rafael.

STREETS — Awarded a $14,700 contract to Bresnan-Dalecio Inc. of San Rafael for street resurfacing in the city, below the city's $16,950 estimate and below the bids of Ghilotti Brothers Inc., ($17,887.50), all of San Rafael, and McGuire and Hester ($17,887.50) of Oakland.

BICYCLE — Authorized a lease agreement with the Northwestern Pacific Railroad for a bicycle path on the railroad right-of-way if the railroad agrees to allow emergency vehicles on the bike path and to extend its time limit for reclaiming rights to the right-of-way if the city gives up use of the path.

ENVIRONMENT — Changed city ordinance to allow environmental impact reports to be considered separately or in conjunction with project plans rather than requiring joint review.

PAPER — Decided to continue allowing Marin Sanitary Service to gather newspapers for recycling rather than contracting with Golden State Paper Co. of Pomona for sale of paper collected by the city.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to Oct. 29 at 7:30 p.m. in city hall to continue public hearing on the proposed general plan.

Volunteer Army Said Improving

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The volunteer Army is better than it was when the draft ended last year and will continue to improve, Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway said yesterday.

Callaway told the Commonwealth Club of California that although some recruiting goals have not been met, the volunteer army is "far above its reenlistment quotas and has been ever since the draft ended."

The Army secretary said that when the draft came to an end last December, the Army consisted of 10 divisions, of which only four were "combat ready." Presently there are 13 divisions, and 10 of these are "combat ready," he said.

Callaway said the Army had a two-pronged approach to getting volunteers, one beingto provide a standard of living roughly comparable to that on the outside and the second to make service in the Army "meaningful."

"You can't buy an army with money," he said. "Young people getting out of the Army now have found maturity, education and job satisfaction.

San Francisco Library Chief Will Give Talk

The meeting will begin with a wine and no-host cocktail social at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7:15 p.m. It is open to the public. Reservations may be made with Roy Davis of Corte Madera.

LIE DETECTION PIONEER

Polygraph Group Will Honor San Rafael Man

By NELS JOHNSON

Clarence D. (Cap) Lee of San Rafael cannot tell a lie.

The 95-year-old Lee, a charter member of Berkeley's first police department and the force's oldest surviving member, is credited with developing one of the forerunners of the polygraph, or lie detector.

Lee, who joined the Berkeley force in 1906 when August Vollmer became the city's first police chief, will be honored by the American Polygraph Association as a polygraph pioneer in ceremonies tomorrow at his home at 8 Portola Avenue.

A plaque to be presented to Lee by the association, a professional group "dedicated to truth," lauds him for his "outstanding contribution and inspiration in pioneering in the field of polygraph."

Lee was among the first of a handful of men who developed lie detectors in the 1920s, and collaborated with psychiatrist John A. Larson, another polygraph pioneer, and psychologist Leonarde Keeler, who is generally recognized as having developed the prototype of modern polygraph devices, according to Richard D. Paterson, chairman of the 900-member association.

Lee, recovering at home from a bout with the Hong Kong influenza reminisced the other day about his days as a police science pioneer, a broad smile cracking his weathered face as his life flashed past in vignettes.

"I'm a little bit modest and I never brag, but if you're interested, I'll tell my story as it is," he said. "I wouldn't tell a lie."

Lee was born in Mechanicsville, Iowa, in 1878, attended high school and worked as a secretary for his grandfather, who had been a Civil War surgeon. He moved to Berkeley at the turn of the century and became a stenographer for a San Francisco canning company.

A banjo and guitar player, Lee became acquainted with Berkeley Marshal August Vollmer, who was also a musician. Vollmer was elected first chief of the Berkeley Police Department in 1906, and asked his friend to join the three-man department as a stenographer.

Lee's interest in the polygraph was not unlike that of the widely publicized Italian criminologist Cesare Lombroso, who experimented in 1895 with a glove in an attempt to detect deception by blood pressure changes. Lombroso, however, was primarily interested in criminal identification through physical characteristics, and did not pursue his glove work.

"I was one of the first to think along the lines of lie detection because I read a story ... pure fiction ... about an Italian who hooked a glove to a meter ... It hit me right away that this was a thing for the police," according to Lee.

"When I first read that piece of fiction, it turned me on. But I couldn't get anyone around there interested until John Larson came along," he said.

Using university equipment, Larson, also a Berkeley policeman, developed in the 1920s a bulky device that could record the blood pressure, pulse and respiration of a subject. "The machine was a great big thing. You could scarcely call it portable," Lee recalled.

Lee said he had for years dreamed of building a lie detector, and began experimenting about 1916 with what was to become his first model. It was finished after "several years of thinking, and several years of building," he said.

"I used tin cans for pressure chambers, a lot of rubber hose ... made diaphragms from inner tubes and hooked it to a sphygmomanometer," a medical blood pressure device, Lee said.

Lee said his son, Howard C. Lee, also of San Rafael, refined the instrument, and the family obtained a patent in the 1920s.

Among those tested on the device was a daughter, Beatrice Westgate, now also San Rafael resident. "It used to scare the pie out of me," she said.

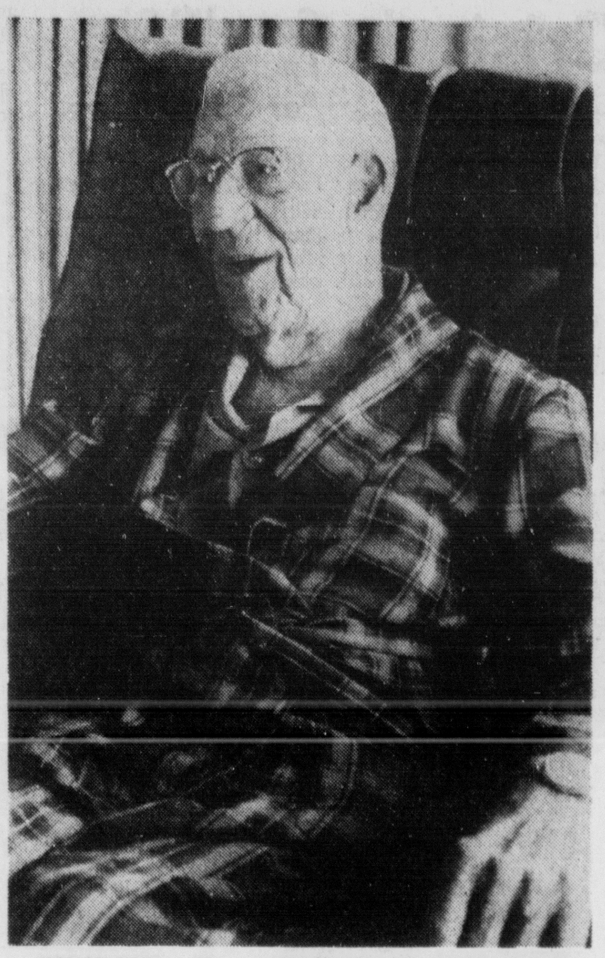

By the late 1920s, the Lee family had become one of the earliest manufacturers of the lie detector, selling 110 models to law enforcement agencies around the nation, and seveal foreign countries.

"I quit selling them because of monied competition from New York and Chicago," Lee said. "They began putting them out like Ford automobiles." Lee's son, who assumed production of the devices, sold the last model in 1964 for $650. The first machine sold for $150 decades ago.

Lee retired as captain of detectives of the Berkeley police in 1936, lectured, and wrote articles and several books about his work in police science. One of the volumes, "The Instrumental Detection of Deception" published in 1953, is still regarded as a text in its field, according to polygraph association chairman Paterson.

Lee lives with his wife, Bertha, whom he married in 1904. The couple had six children, five of whom survive.

What's in the future for Cap Lee? He said he's looking forward for his 100th birthday.

HONOR DUE — Clarence D. (Cap) Lee, 95-year-old pioneer in the development of the lie detector, will be honored tomorrow by the American Polygraph Association. (Jim Kean Photo)

Symbolic Temperance March Held

HILLSBORO, Ohio (UPI) — It's been 100 years since Eliza Jane (Mother) Thompson led defiant women into Hillsboro's 13 bars where they prayed, sang hymns and stayed until they pressured the owners one by one to close.

It was the beginning of the Women's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU), and about 100 present-day members, slowed by the years but still moved by the spirit, marched again yesterday.

The women, in their 60s, 70s and 80s, carried signs such as "Alcoholism — Worst Pollution" and "Dethrone King Al" to remind the 5,500 residents of this southwestern Ohio community of the evils of drinking.

They wore bonnets, shawls and long dresses and marched down Main Street past the city's 17 bars and carry-out stores behind a high school band, to mark the start of a centennial state convention in the community where it all began a century ago.

They stopped short of entering the bars, saying the march was only symbolic, but some in the group said they were tempted.

"I'd like to march right in there and start praying," said a lady in a bonnet as she passed the Court Street Bar. "But in this day and age I'm afraid they'd put us in jail."

The threat of jail didn't bother Mother Thompson, who led groups of women right into the bars in 1873 where they sang, prayed and lectured until they pressured the owners to close their doors, giving birth to the WCTU.

"I think it's great that they're parading," one wobbly customer said from Scotties Bar as the ladies paraded past. "I even left my beer on the table to come to the window to watch.

Most of the work of the WCTU today is centered on distributing literature pointing up the health and social hazards of alcohol, drugs and cigarettes.

Firemen's Long Hair Said Safe

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Harvey P. Utech, an engineer with the fire program of the National Bureau of Standards, told a federal court yesterday the length of a fireman's hair posed no threat to his safety.

He testified at a hearing in which two city firemen, dismissed last August because their hair allegedly violated grooming regulations, sought reinstatement to the $12,000-a-year jobs.

The city maintained that long hair posed a danger to firemen while they wear oxygen masks. Utech said the oxygen masks used by the city fire department provided "only a marginal level of safety."

Bee Backed For Official Insect

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) —The honeybee may reign as Michigan's official state insect.

State Rep. Robert D. Young, R-Saginaw, introduced a bill in the House yesterday, designating the Honeybee as the state insect.

Young said he didn't think there would be any trouble getting the honeybee enshrined as the state insect. Michigan already has a state bird, stone, fish, flower and gem.

A grass fire three weeks ago on this San Rafael slope overlooking Highway 101 provided the perfect blackboard for someone to express his political sentiments. Explosion Injures 10 In Theater In Saigon

SAIGON (UPI) —An explosion in a downtown Saigon movie theater tonight injured 10 persons, two of them seriously enough to be hospitalized.

Witnesses told investigating military and civilian police officials that the explosion followed a commotion and a brief scuffle in a part of the Eden movie house where a group of soldiers were seated.

Two men in uniform fled up the aisle and out of the theatre "just an instant before the explosion," one witness said.

Officials at the scene said the explosive device seemed to be "a concussion grenade-type object." No fragments were found immediately.

The likelihood of terrorism was temporarily ruled out. Smashed seats and debris from the walls and ceiling littered the area of the explosion.

A crowd estimated at between 45 and 50 people were watching the Chinese movie, "Fist to Fist," when the explosion occurred.

Rights Declaration Is Observed By UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Schenk Graf Stauffenberg's father tried to kill Adolf Hitler and failed. He was executed for it along with dozens of other German officers.

Stauffenberg, recalling the turbulent events, appeared in the United Nations yesterday as a delegate from West Germany. He read a statement to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Stauffenberg said many Germans lost their lives in active resistance attempting "to restore justice and the respect for human dignity in Europe" during World War II.

He said that, therefore, the West German government "regards the 25th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights as an event of great significance."

The men who drew up the present West German governmental format "considered it their task to safeguard through the constitution the freedom of the citizen, his individual and social rights, in such a way that what had happened during those years would never occur again," Stauffenberg said.

Stauffenberg's father carried a time bomb into Hitler's eastern front headquarters on July 20, 1944 in the opening stage of the abortive coup of the German armed forces against the Nazi regime.

The bomb exploded but only injured Hitler and the coup failed.

Highway Patrol Chief Remarries

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California Highway Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski has remarried, six months after he was divorced from his first wife.

He married Barbara Jean Martin of Sacramento at the First United Methodist Church Tuesday. She is the business director of a Sacramento health center.

The marriage of Pudinski and his first wife, Dorothy, was dissolved on grounds of irreconcilable differences. Pudinski was ordered to pay $750 a month to support his former wife and two daughters.

Dual Attack Pledged On Litter

Neighbors of Tamalpais High School last night mounted a dual attack on traffic, litter and noise created by what most agreed was "a small group of students."

Following a meeting of some 40 Homestead Valley and Almonte residents, various law enforcement and school officials said they would:

Beef up efforts at stopping students from strewing trash, trespassing, speeding and parking illegally.

Form a committee to work on long-range solutions to the problems.

At another public meeting on Nov. 20, the disgruntled residents will review solutions proposed by the committee.

Tam principal Lawrence E. Sheppard said a staff-student group which has been working to clean up littered areas will continue in the meantime.

Sgt. James C. Dukes of the California Highway Patrol pledged a renewed campaign to ticket those cars which park illegally on Homestead and Almonte boulevards.

Supervisor Michael Wornum said he will try to enlist board of supervisors support for a legislative bill to let school boards permit smoking on campuses, an activity now forbidden.

Many present at the forum, organized by the Almonte Improvement Club, said creation of a smoking area on campus would halt the exodus of many smoking students from campus. It is such students, many contended, who cause most of the problems.

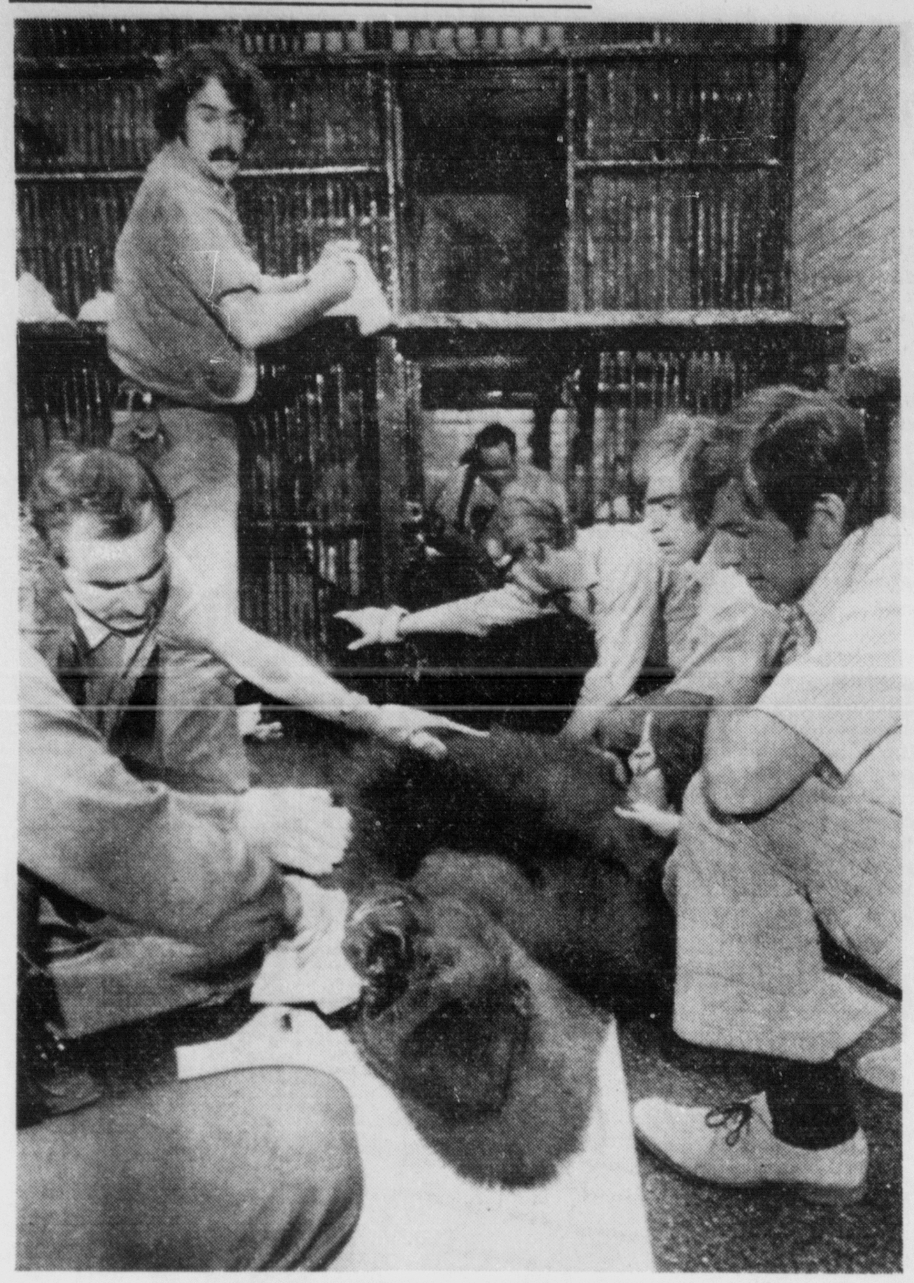

The major complaints voiced were litter, speeding, illegal parking, students blocking streets, trespassing, mail thefts, vandalism, drug use and noise.

Making a pitch for declaring Homestead and Almonte boulevards off limits to students, Nicholas J. Hainovsky, of 21 Homestead Boulevard, said student-related problems in his neighborhood fell off between 1964 and 1969, when his street was off limits.

Although no one wanted to see a return to the "closed campus," with students forbidden to leave school during class hours, many supported the limited closure.

Various law enforcement and school officials conceded jurisdictional uncertainty makes it difficult for a resident to get satisfaction if he has a problem.

The campus itself is in the City of Mill Valley; Homestead and Almonte boulevards are patrolled by the Marin sheriff's department for law violations, and by the highway patrol for traffic offenses.

HE IS BOUND FOR LONDON

One of Chicago's swinging bachelors — Kisoro, a 14-year-old Lincoln Park Zoo gorilla — is bound for London for breeding purposes. Zoo keepers had their hands full yesterday, carrying the 314-pound gorilla from his cage to a loading location. He was knocked out by a tranquilizer.

COMMUTERS CONDEMN TOLL HIKE

Marin and Sonoma County residents listen to Golden Gate Commuters Association speakers demand that the Golden Gate Bridge District directors drop plans for a 25-cent toll increase, due for hearing by the bridge board Oct. 26. Last night's rally at the Marin County Civic Center drew about 50 of the thousands of daily commuters. Protest sparkplug Adele Nolan (second from left at speakers' table) said "We're competing with the World Series." The group unanimously voted opposition to the toll hike and about a dozen persons volunteered cash or services to the campaign.

Nader Awarded 'Bump' Damages

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A federal judge ordered Allegheny Airlines today to pay $50,000 in damages to consumer advocate Ralph Nader and a Connecticut citizens group for "bumping" Nader off a flight last year.

U. S. District Judge Charles R. Richey said Allegheny was guilty of "willful and wanton misconduct" for deliberately overbooking all its flights and concealing that policy from the public. The incident occurred April 28, 1972, in Washington and caused Nader to miss a scheduled speech in Connecticut.

Though Richey noted all major airlines sell more tickets than they can honor, he said Allegheny's overbooking was "substantial." He said the airline bumped 945 confirmed passengers in April 1972 — the month involved in the Nader case — and from January 1969, through August 1972, denied seats to 15,929 passengers holding confirmed reservations.

He said in an 11-page opinion:

"Since the defendant herein (Allegheny) intentionally engaged in substantial overselling, and intentionally did not inform the public of this practice and the attendant risks and intentionally sought to conceal such information from all its passengers and particularly from the victims of this practice, it is clear that the defendants acted not only wantonly but with malice."

Richey ordered Allegheny to pay Nader $10 in compensatory damages for expenses incurred as a result of the missed flight and $25,000 in punitive damages. He also ordered the airline to pay $51 in nominal damages to the Counecticut Citizens Action Group (CCAG) and $25,000 in punitive damages.

He noted that the law provides for assessment of damages against a wrongdoer "to punish him for the good of the community for his outrageous conduct and to deter others from such conduct."

The civil case was tried before Richey without a jury on Sept. 4.

Landscape Plans Win Approval

The Novato Plan Committee last night approved the architectural site and landscape plans for Village Marin project for U.S. Development Corp.

The plans call for 116 attached units on 18 acres of flat land, 58 other attached units on 17 acres of hillside land and 15 single-family homes. The development is on the Pacheco Ranch in the area across and south of Hamilton Air Force Base.

The committee continued for further study, a request for two signs for Goodman's Home Center at 950 Seventh Street, the only other item on the agenda.

Developers Are Slapped On Designs

Two proposed Petaluma subdivision developments will need major redesign, the Development Allotment Control Board was told last night.

Planning staff members advised the board that developments proposed by Petaluma Partners Inc. and Luis, Williams and Minor Inc. violate the city subdivision ordinance and must be redesigned if they are to be considered for a building allotment in 1974-75.

Dennis Bolje, senior planner, said both subdivisions plan houses fronting on Ely Boulevard South while the ordinance requires subdivision houses to back on major streets.

Board members said they would question the developers on their plans when they appear before the board late this month or in early November.

The board heard staff reports on nine of the 18 proposed developments and will continue the staff reviews next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Bolje said board members also questioned design concepts by Qantas Development Co. for 100 homes on North McDowell Boulevard. Board members said they were concerned with plans for varying lot sizes and said they would question developers closely on the plans.

The board will review plans for 1,495 living units and will recommend which 500 units should be built under the Petaluma Growth Control Plan.

Thefts Lead Crime List

Thefts, including 32 cases of shoplifting, led the list of crimes reported in San Rafael last month with 140 cases, San Rafael police said today.

Police also reported 50 burglaries, including 31 residential burglaries; 28 assaults, eight robberies and one forcible rape.

Police also reported 19 stolen cars, 10 recovered, and 16 arrests for felony drug violations.

Hamilton Hangars Said Ideal As Vocational Education Site

Surplus hangars at Hamilton Air Force Base would make an "ideal facility" for a vocational educational program, the Marin Community College District board declared last night.

The district is one of 15 public and private nonprofit agencies proposing future uses for surplus lands and facilities at the base.

Dr. John A. Grasham, district superintendent and president, informed the board that four hangars could be used for several vocationally related programs. He noted auto-technology, diesel technology, auto-body and fender, air conditioning-heating technology and the district apprenticeship training program as likely uses for the hangars.

Acquiring the base facilities would end the need for rented facilities in San Rafael for the auto-body and fender program would no longer be needed and could end need to construct auto technology facilities at the new Indian Valley Colleges campus in Novato.

Diesel technology and heating-air conditioning technology might be added to district courses if the new facilities are obtained, he said.

Although altering and conforming the hangars to college use could cost $100,000 or more, offsetting savings could be realized by deletions from the Indian Valley construction, Grasham said.

Grasham also reported operating costs at Hamilton would not exceed those at other district sites.

Trustees will meet in special session next week to further consider proposed uses for the air base.

Graham Sees Bigger Crisis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Evangelist Billy Graham said yesterday America has experienced a traumatic year which has kept the country off balance.

"Just when Watergate seemed to be subsiding there was the Agnew case. Now the Mideast war threatens another world crisis," he said. "We must all dedicate ourselves to God if the nation is to overcome these troubles."

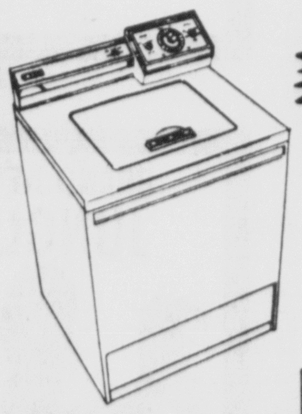

Graham told a prayer breakfast that an even bigger world crisis looms just over the horizon. "Russia and China are glaring at each other. Russia is deliberating whether to make a pre-emptive strike before China gets full nuclear capacity in 18 months. Permanent peace may be further away than ever before."

Novato Girl Seeking Grand National Title

Eighteen-year-old Sheri Ann Bertsche of Novato says, "Riding is my life," and she has owned horses since she was 4.

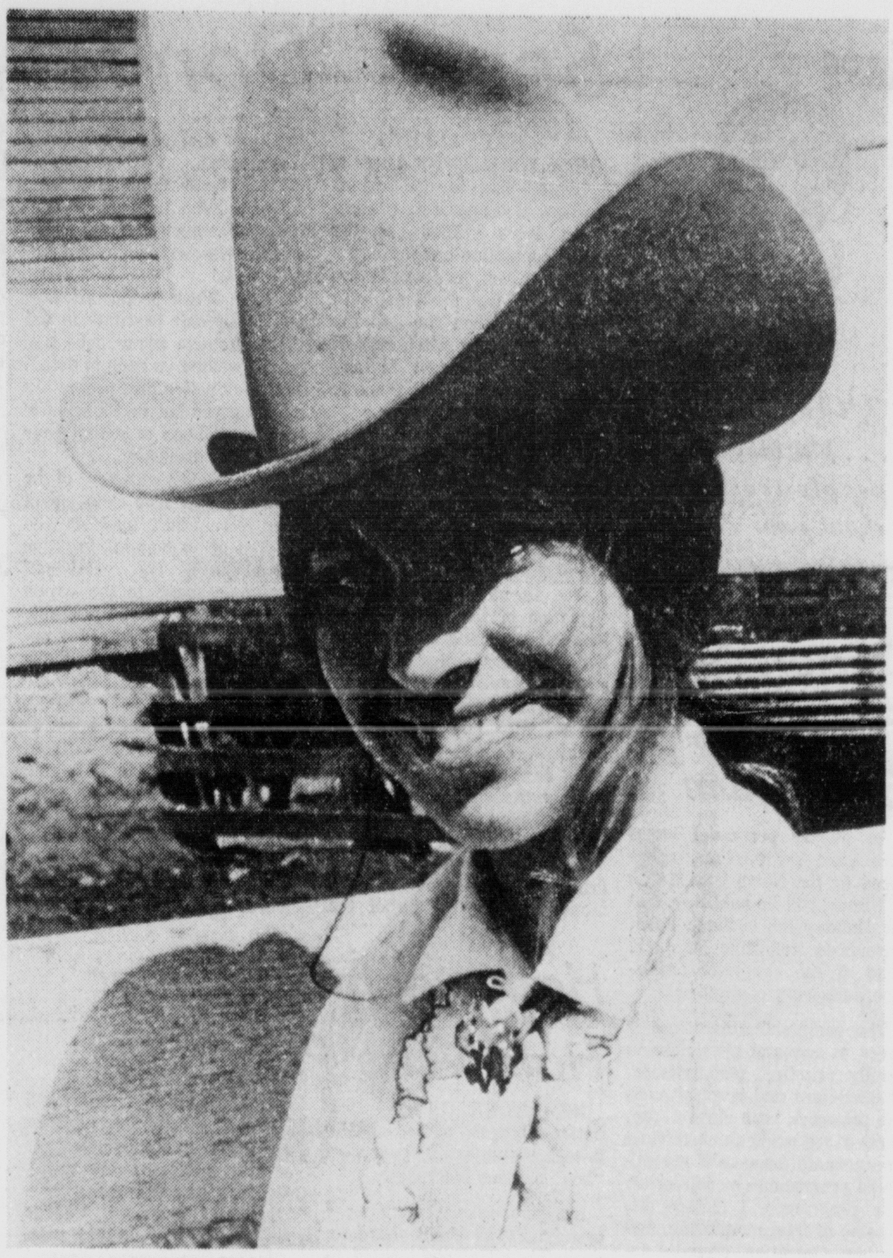

Now one of the entrants in the contest for queen of the Grand National Horse and Livestock Show at the Cow Palace, Sheri says that her dream is to start a horse breeding farm of her own.

Sheri's interest in horses is not all-consuming, however, as she likes to play guitar and compose her own songs, and she writes poetry.

A June graduate of Terra Linda High School, she plans to enter the College of Marin next semester. She is the daughter of Mrs. James Bowman and Ralph Bertsche.

Sheri will appear with the other show contestants before the panel of four judges on Tuesday at the Cow Palace, and if chosen Miss Grand National, she will serve as official hostess of the show Oct. 26 through Nov. 4.

Sheri already served a stint as queen of Novato Western Weekend earlier this year.

NOVATO HORSEWOMAN Sheri Ann Bertsche has owned horses since she was 4. Now the 18-year-old is a contestant for queen of the Grand National Horse and Livestock Show at the Cow Palace. "Riding is my life," says the Terra Linda High School graduate.

Rolls Royces Carry Family Members To Film Festival

By MOLLY MARIN

The three chauffeur-driven Rolls Royces parked in front of the Palace of Fine Arts in San Francisco for last night's opening of the San Francisco Film Festival belong to Herminia Kleiber of San Rafael.

The sapphire blue Rolls, rumored to have belonged to royalty, according to Miss Kleiber, has been used in the past by stars attending the festival's opening, but this year festival chairman, Claude Jarman, told Miss Kleiber, "I want you to use it," she said.

Miss Kleiber rode in the blue Rolls with Harry C. Rogers of San Rafael, and following in the black and silver autos were her nephews, Paul and Robert Kleiber and their wives, all of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. Gary Gomez of San Anselmo; and Mr. and Mrs. James F. Barbic of San Francisco.

After the premiere of "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams" the party dined and danced at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Miss Kleiber and the Jarmans, who recently moved to Ross, were neighbors for many years in Napa.

VISITING THEIR friends, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Klimmeck in San Rafael for a month, Mr. and Mrs. William Eckert of the Bronx, N.Y., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Tuesday at a dinner at a Marin restaurant.

It was also the Klimmecks' eighth wedding anniversary, and when they were married, the Eckerts were their witnesses. The two couples were formerly neighbors in New York, and the Eckerts came to visit the Klimmecks especially to celebrate their golden wedding.

On Saturday the two couples will have a festive dinner at the Klimmeck home for some 10 guests, and the celebrants will enjoy a wedding cake.

It is the first trip west for the Eckerts, who were married in their native Germany.

A SURPRISE baby shower was given last week for Mrs. Robert F. Mackay of Ignacio. Hosting the shower, at Muriel Mackay's home was Mrs. Ann Thompson, who until Sunday, when she returned to England, was visiting the Mackays.

Guests were retired and active stewardesses whom Mrs. Mackay and Mrs. Thompson knew from their flying and student nursing days.

The Mackays are expecting their second child.

THEIR 60TH wedding anniversary will be celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Matt Graham of San Anselmo on Nov. 8, when the couple plan to visit with their son Roy Graham, and his wife in Fort Bragg.

They will also be celebrating their son's birthday Nov. 10 when the family gathers at the home in Fort Bragg.

Married in San Francisco, the senior Grahams have lived in Marin since 1919. They also are parents of the late Roger Graham and have seven grandchildren and two great grandchildren, one a new baby girl.

14-Year-Old Actress Feels Right At Home In Metropolitan Museum

By JOY STILLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — When 14-year-old Sally Prager goes to the Metropolitan Museum of Art these days she feels pretty much at home. After all, she practically lived there for a couple of months while making a movie.

"The guards still remember me and tap me on the back and ask, 'Where's the camera?' It's fun to go back," adds Sally, who is in the film, "From the Mixed-Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler," runs away from home and hides out with her younger brother in the famed museum.

"We got to talking about whether it could really happen and when they showed me all the security I knew it couldn't," says the petite teen-ager. "It's sort of awful to know how it really is; it's nicer to think you could do it."

As a native New Yorker Sally had often been in the Metropolitan but she never expected to bathe in the cafeteria pool, as she does in the movie. In fact, she never expected to be in a movie at all, although she was exposed to the theatrical profession throughout her childhood. Her mother, Georgann Johnson, has appeared on Broadway, in films and on television, and her father, the late Stanley Prager, was an actor and director.

HER ROLE came about through a casting call to the Manhattan private school she was attending. When Sally was offered the part she had a big decision to make, since she had been looking forward to going to camp in Vermont.

"I had a discussion with my three sisters (two older and one younger) and they thought I should do it. My mother said that she was not going to pressure me and finally, I decided to do it."

Sally admits that the fact that she had always loved the Newbery Award-winning novel on which the film was based influenced her to give up camp in favor of the movie, which teamed her with 11-year-old Johnny Doran as her brother.

"We got to be good friends and had a lot of fun kidding around," recalls Sally, who has just started the ninth grade at a Connecticut boarding school.

Two other highlights, she adds, were having her real mother play her screen mother and working with Ingrid Bergman, who appears in the role of a recluse won over by the children.

"She made it very, very easy for both of us, she's a very nice person," the 4-foot-11, 89-pound youngster says. "If there's anything I have good memories about it's her."

She also fondly remembers as the scene she most enjoyed making "the one in the hall of armor with all the horses. It was fun doing it and being in the museum at night and everything."

"I LIKED the movie after I got over being embarrassed; it's strange to see yourself and hear your voice," says Sally, who didn't see any of the film until it was completed. "I really didn't have to do much acting. It's not like Claudia was a migrant worker or anything I was unfamiliar with. She was like one of my friends."

So far, she reports, nobody has treated her any differently, but then she has only told a few friends, "who want to know when it's coming out and if they can go for free." But with release of the film, her anonymity won't last long and she hopes her relationship with her classmates won't change.

Sally, long auburn-tinged hair parted in the middle and a sprinkle of freckles across her nose, claims she is interested in too many things to pick a career right now.

"I don't want to restrict myself to one thing and miss out on everything else," she explains of a future which includes no plans for more film work though she doesn't entirely rule out the possibility. "Something has to come up and I'll think about it then."

Perfume Business Not Bothered By Economy

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) - One business little affected by the ups and downs of the national economy is the perfume business.

A woman might look at the family budget and skip buying a new dress because it's a major expenditure. But she'll go right on pampering herself and pleasing her man with perfume or cologne because, comparatively, she's not wrecking the monthly bank balance.

Mrs. Henry (Anne) Kahn, whose job is sensing what women want in scents, says so.

There's another factor going for the industry now, she said.

It's the new freedom women feel-"As women have become more conscious of themselves, they do more things to please themselves."

This new consciousness doesn't mean that women forget about pleasing men too, she said.

"JUST AS she wears makeup to attract, she uses perfume. Liberation or not, there still are basic things between men and women. Today's woman wants it all," she said.

"I've no way of knowing, but I'll bet Betty Friedan wears perfume."

Mrs. Khan, originally from Newport News, Va., started her career with a degree in political science from the University of Pennsylvania.

"A lot of business is politics," she said.

She came into the perfume business about 18 months ago and now acts as brand manager for Prince Matchabelli, the perfume firm founded in the 1930s by a Russian prince who'd emigrated to New York. Now, it's part of the Chesbrough-Pond's Inc., business complex.

Previously, she was in sales with Procter and Gamble, in Cincinnati, and an account executive with the Foote Cone and Belding ad agency in New York.

A major part of her job currently is traveling the country with Matchabelli research teams, talking with store personnel and huddling with groups of six, seven, eight women at a time to sense what they want in perfumes.

THE FEMALE panelists, drawn from various civic, church and club groups, usually are in the 18-55 year range.

It might be an arbitrary age group, she said, but "we feel these are the women who tend to wear more perfumes and colognes. The early teens are not sure yet...usually they've been experimenting with whatever was on Mommy's dresser."

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Black Girl Is Disappointed With Others Of Her Race

RAP:

Black is beautiful?

I used to go to a school where there were mostly white students and few minorities. You didn't have to worry about being conned for money, and you weren't afraid you'd be jumped when you walked down the hall. We didn't have any problems.

You're thinking — "she's just another prejudiced white." Wrong! I'm black.

I could talk to those white kids, expressing myself without being afraid, and vice versa. My brother went to a nearby high school which had no racial problems either, just like my junior high.

Then my father lost his job and we had to move into an almost black neighborhood. It's awful, Helen and Sue!

At school, the black kids won't let the white kids use the bathrooms unless they pay. And there are so many more blacks, they can get away with it. They even have the teachers scared spitless.

If you don't go along with these bullies, you'd just better not be black —and you'd better quit school. So I hung around with them, and I was surprised at what they did. They were the complete rulers. There were fights almost every day. Once I saw five of my "friends" beating up a white boy, because he wouldn't give them money.

My brother got beat up because he fell in love with a white girl — and it wasn't the whites that did it.

You might think I'm an "Uncle Tom" but who caused it? I'm just sick of the trouble that starts up because of prejudice, and I have to say that the prejudice (in my school anyway) is on my side of the fence. Why is it that when the underdogs become strong, they treat people almost worse than they were treated when they were weak? Why don't they remember how it was and try to make life better for everybody, rather than "getting even"? — UNHAPPY WITH MY RACE

DEAR UNHAPPY:

You've asked questions about problems that only you and thinking people like you (of all races) can solve. You will, someday, as opportunities equalize and bitterness at last subsides. How soon that will be depends on how fast we stop taking sides - and accept others for what they are: not judging them by what their ancestors did, or the color of their skins. - HELEN AND SUE

RAP:

I'm engaged to a wonderful guy. He wants me to go to Europe with him to meet his parents who live there. We will be staying with them, then return by plane. Our wedding is planned for December, and he wants his folks to know me (and I them) before I'm their daughter-in-law.

My mother says this isn't proper. People don't travel long distances together before they're married. What's your opinion? — ADULT AND ENGAGED

A AND E:

I think it's a fantastic opportunity. I wouldn't pass up a trip like this for the world, especially with the man I'm going to marry!

(How about it, Mom — or maybe I should ask my Dad?) — SUE

DEAR ADULT AND ENGAGED:

You're adult and engaged — and your fiance is "taking you home to meet his folks." So what, if "home" is halfway across the world? A jet plane will get you there without an overnight stop — if this is what worries your mother. HELEN

Doctors Set For Natal Symposium

An all-day peri-natal intensive care symposium, sponsored by the North Bay March of Dimes, will be held Nov. 8 at the Holiday Inn in Santa Rosa, announced Dr. Olive M. Jack, head of the chapter's professional advisory committee.

The combined symposium is given to acquaint physicians in family practice, pediatricians, obstetricians and hospital nursing personnel with current concepts in the medical, obstetrical and neonatal aspects of complicated pregnancies or deliveries. The program will include discussion of fetal monitoring, meconium aspiration, prenatal nutrition and intensive care of infants.

Participants will be Dr. Paul T. Hohe, clinical instructor; Dr. George A. Gregory, associate professor of anesthesia and pediatrics; Dr. Maxine Asnis, clinical staff, department of pediatrics, all of the University of California, San Francisco;

Dr. Harry A. Ackley, director of the intensive care nursery, Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital; Dr. Ronald F. Unzelman, staff member of Memorial Hospital and Community Hospital, Santa Rosa, and junior assistant clinical instructor in obstetrics-gynecology at the University of California, San Francisco, and Dr. Paul R. Ferrari, fellow of the American Academy of Pediatrics, San Rafael.

Dr. Ferrari will share with doctors and nurses from the four counties served by the North Bay March of Dimes Chapter results of his work with babies who were born small for their gestational age. The SGA infant is classified as premature because of his low birth weight at full term. The risk for such babies is far greater than to those of normal weight, with a four to five times higher mortality rate than with a baby over 5½ pounds.

The registration fee includes the symposium, lunch and refreshments. Pre-registration forms are available through the County Medical Society Offices in Napa, Marin, Sonoma or Solano counties, or from Dr. James R. O'Malley, 1140 Sonoma Avenue, Santa Rosa.

Seven 'Don'ts' For Retirement Years

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) —There is a lighter side to the serious business of retirement, a future which faces millions as the senior population increases.

Helen Alpert, an editor, takes a look at the problem in a lighter vein when she lists the pitfalls and traps in the current issue of "Retirement Living" where she writes of ways to ruin a beautiful future.

"To start off," she says, "here are the seven easiest ways to make retirement intolerable. Each is guaranteed or your money back. Try a few; or invent some of your own. You'll regret it."

One. Do no homework in anticipation of retirement. Don't look for any kind of work —it will spoil your loafing. A second career? Nonsense. Retirement means you've got plenty of time for nothing— planning is for plodders. Breeze along letting each day take care of itself. This is the only way to keep yourself open for lively surprises.

Those surprises? Like discovering you've run out of food money by the middle of the week—or that your car's being repossessed.

Two. Never think of money. All you have to know is that financial security hovers somewhere between income and outgo.

Three. When people ask how you feel, don't hestitate to tell them. Itemize every ache and pain, dwelling on each in detail. You may notice that people are avoiding you but that's because they can't hope to match your interesting diseases.

Four. Quickly move out of the community where you spent your life. Don't question the wisdom of abandoning familiar surroundings. The worst you can do is move to the wrong climate, wrong house, mobile park or condominium. Stay optimistic; you can always move again and again. That's how the West was won.

Five. Move in with a son or daughter or next door to them or on the same block. Living with your children will give you something engrossing to do every minute—babysitting, dishwashing, mopping floors, preparing meals and snacks several times a day. It will feel just like home again. Except that it's not your home.

Six. Ignore your health. Sneer at doctors and periodic health checkups. You feel fit as at 40 except for some shortness of breath and a cigarette cough. As for cholesterol and your paunch, why waste money on a doctor? You can take your pick of any quickie diets in magazines. These diets are all over the place and always getting debunked, but why concern yourself with such trivialities?

Seven. Loaf all you please. Work is for peasants. Having nothing to do proves you're retired; don't spoil it by getting involved in politics, hobbies, clubs, civic life, volunteerism and senior power. Of course a person who has nothing to do gets in everybody's way and has nothing to contribute to any conversation, but that's not your problem.

Miss Alpert concludes that retirement can be full of pitfalls and her seven easy directives "can guide you into the best of the many lurking traps.

"The moral is: Start making mistakes now. Don't wait until tomorrow. What's ahead is only the rest of your life!"

Halloween Costumer Holds The Price Line

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's biggest maker of Halloween costumes this year says "boo" to price increases.

If it helps take the pain out of costs rising all about you these days this bit of news ought to cheer you. Your kids can do their spookin' as devils, skeletons or witches at 1972 prices.

Alfred R. Fischer, sales manager of the Ben Cooper Costume Company, said in an interview that "we're holding the 1972 line."

The price of costumes ranges from $1.29 to $2.98. Accessories —hoses, wigs, hats, beards and such—run from 19 cents to $1.98.

Fischer said the costumes are mostly for those under 12. "After that age," he said, "the accessories are used for do-it yourself costumes.

The Halloween man said boys and girls have a choice of 200 characters — ranging from comic strip to movie characters with practically everything in between, including playland biggies such as Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy.

Fischer said during the last 15 years Superman has moved into a top spot, followed, 10 years ago, by a Batman craze. This year among the hot characters are Spiderman, Charlie Chaplin, and Laurel and Hardy.

Clowns, princesses, astronauts, cats, lions, and Casper the Ghost are other alltime favorites among Halloween costumes. Casper is made by a Copper competitor— "number four."

Inside the costume works, it's already Halloween, 1974. "Our designers started working on next year's line six months ago," Fischer said.

The wig part of the business isn't as great as it could be. Too much competition from real hair-dos of an unusual type, Fischer said.

In recent years, according to Fischer, the accessories part of the Halloween industry has grown considerably.

He attributes this to the fact that more teen-agers and adults of all ages are having Halloween parties.

Proceeds Of $1,650 Reported From Tea

Proceeds from the annual associates tea of the Raccoon Branch of Marin General Hospital Volunteers amounted to $1,650, according to Jules Becker, public relations director for the hospital.

The tea was held at the home of Mrs. Adolph Mueller in Belvedere, with 189 guests.

Time Is The Only Key Leisure Item

NEW YORK (UPI) — A classical definition of leisure says that it requires little or no expenditure and the only prerequisite is time.

Americans work hard at leisure, spending over $42 billion on recreational activities in 1971. That's double what was spent in that categroy in 1960. The definition about "expenditure" obviously refers to the "leisure" of another era.

Patterns, Colors Are Big Interest In Men's Clothes

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The cut of men's clothing has stabilized to the point where the chief interest in the fall lines lies in the color and pattern of the fabric, and in the fabric itself.

The pattern emphasis is on glen plaids in business suits, the same plaids that were so popular during the roaring twenties. In sports suits, pants, and sportcoats the pattern is a bit louder—tartans, windowpanes, overplaids, checks and houndstooth plaids.

The newest fabric interest is "stretch woven," a fabric produced by weaving cloth from fibers that have been kinked by chemical or mechanical processes to resemble coil springs. Such fabrics look like traditional wovens but have the comfort and stretch of doubleknits.

The strongest single fashion direction is in the flannel look not only in real flannels but in stretch woven and double knit fabrics made to look like the traditional flannel of past popularity. And gray flannel, of course, is among the more popular varieties.

THE NEWEST COLOR to attain popularity this fall is a redbrown shade such as cordovan, rust or terra cotta. A true chocolate shade is also in at the moment and so are dark blue, hunter or forest green and deep wine colors. A camel shade shows up repeatedly in anything from wraparound coats to sportsjackets.

Although the basic suit design is fairly standard—wide lapels, a bit more shoulder, waist suppression and straight hanging trousers—there is a lot more variety to sports clothes, with such "country" details as hacking pockets, deep side vents, envelope patch pockets, suede trims and elbow patches.

The navy blue blazer, either single or double-breasted, is back in favor—if it ever went away. It is usually shown with patterned slacks, color coordinated, and worn with a sweater. For a dressy look bow ties show above the sweater, and if you want a dressy country look you can add a patterned vest to a gray flannel suit.

J.P. Stevens and Co., one of the larger fabric companies, reports major interest in coarsely-textured tweeds, fine flannels and saxonys in a season dominated by woven wool fabrics. These woolen fabrics show up not only in solids but in muted tattersals, big bold glens, and houndstooth and district checks.

The National Association of Men's Sportswear Buyers (NAMSB), in a recent survey of fall marketing preferences, finds that flannel is not only popular but is spearheading a broad movement toward such soft finished goods as moleskin, doeskin, velvet, corduroy, brushed denim, shetland, tweed and such specialty fabrics as knit flannel and cotton suede.

ALTHOUGH SOLID colors are in great demand for fall, the term "solid" is slightly misleading since the solid often consists of as many as three shades of gray spun together, plus heathers, twists and tweeds.

Doubleknits have lost some of their popularity to the wovens' and the stretch wovens but they are still very much in the picture with more than 50 per cent of the pants being sold today made in doubleknits. Many double knit suits in the past have been noted for their bold, different look, but the NAMSB reports this has been toned down to look more like woven goods.

Many of the changes have been forced by substantial price increases in such natural fibers as wool and cotton, so the fall brings in a great number of mixtures of natural fibers with man-made fibers—combinations of polyesters that end the freezing effect of double knits that allow icy winds to blow through in winter.

The Job Market Vs. The Student

By CYNTHIA PARSONS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Most colleges and universities have job counselors — some may be termed placement officers — and almost all secondary schools provide some job placement counseling. But do these people really understand the total job market?

When there were more jobs than graduates, the fact that many school and university counselors may never have held a job outside academia and their knowledge of the business world was limited really didn't matter all that much.

When young persons finished school, they merely "went the rounds" until they found a paying job or they counted on dad to hire them or know someone who would.

Now jobs are scarce, especially for graduates of United States colleges and universities. Skilled and semiskilled jobs are not so difficult to get as professional and semiprofessional ones. But each year the problem increases with thousands of young persons flooding the job market.

THIS PUTS a special burden on school and college counselors. They have a dual responsibility: What course of study should they encourage a student to take? How can they find jobs for those who graduate?

Leaving the first burden aside — that of providing sound counseling regarding academic choices — there is a need for secondary school and university placement officers to learn about the job market.

What follows may sound unreasonable to many guidance counselors. But if young persons are ever to get sound business advice, it is absolutely necessary that schools provide them with expert, not amateur, assistance.

Perhaps parent-teacher organizations this year could look at the background of secondary-school counselors and at the manner in which they conduct their counseling business.

For example: Has a counselor gone through job interviews in many types of business? Has a counselor held a job outside public schooling? Has a counselor visited the personnel office of a number of different businesses, noting what kinds of questions are asked and what weight is given to such things as grades, athletics, part-time employment, leadership positions, a good personal appearance, a one-page resume, family background, a sample or portfolio of work already accomplished?

DOES THE counseling office have a profile on the manpower needs in the immediate locale, in the state as a whole, in the trades as opposed to the professions?

Are students in career programs encouraged to invite job interviewers to see them at work in school.

College or university alumni associations might take on this investigation at the undergraduate level. A committee of businessmen and women might be formed to review just what it is that the placement officers are telling juniors and seniors in college.

They might find out, for example, whether the college counselors have ever held a job outside academia. They might devise a part-time work program to involve counselors in personnel offices in the types of business most students are liable to join.

They also might find out how well the library is stocked with important professional manpower studies. And they might ask each college counselor to write his own resume and criticize it in light of several kinds of professional interests.

Without some sort of external pressure from alumni and parents, there is little likelihood that school or college counseling will improve.

COLLEGE PLAY OPENS TOMORROW

Cathy Cahn and Phillip Pratt, both of San Anselmo, go through final rehearsals in preparation for tomorrow's opening of "The Good Woman of Setzuan" at the College of Marin. Miss Cahn plays the "wife" and Pratt the "first god" in Bertolt Brecht's play about a young girl forced into a life of prostitution by society in prerevolutionary China. The play is being produced by the college's department of theater arts and is directed by H. J. Susser, an instructor in the department. It will be presented tomorrow, Saturday, Wednesday, Oct. 25, 26, 27, 28, Nov. 1, 2, 3 and 4 at 8 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Theater.

The Big Battle Seen Along Canal

By EDWARD K. DeLONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American and Russian arms are pouring into the Middle East at a rate approaching 2,000 tons a day, but U.S. analysts believe the Arab-Israeli war might drag on another week or more before a decisive battle is fought.

When that battle comes, if diplomacy does not achieve a settlement first, officials say it will almost certainly take place along the Suez Canal.

But for the present, they say, it appears this battle will have to await the arrival of replacement arms in the frontline units of both the Arab and the Israeli armies. The days immediately ahead, they say, may well be devoted as much to regrouping and rearming as they are to fighting.

One official said the first indication that such a battle is under way "could be when the Soviets really start pushing hard for a cease-fire." Based on the results of the war thus far, officials said an ultimate battlefield decision would probably go in favor of the Israelis.

"The Arabs had a well-planned, well-organized, well-executed attack with extremely good cover and security," one official said. "They have been fighting well with modern and sophisticated equipment.

"However, they are still being outfought on a comparative basis in terms of casualties, aircraft losses, tank losses and territorial losses.

"It looks like the Israelis have been killing roughly three Arabs for one Israeli, two Arab tanks for one Israeli tank, and maybe two-and-one-half Arab aircraft for each Israeli aircraft," he said.

Precise figures of the losses on each side, particularly the number of casualties, are considered by U.S. analysts to be extremely imprecise. The best figures available for Israeli hardware losses are about 100 aircraft and more than 600 tanks, officials said.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union are mounting major efforts to replace this hardware.

U.S. officials said the American airlift of arms to Israel hit full stride yesterday, matching the Soviet Union in flying 700 to 800 tons of new war materiel per day into the Middle East.

In addition, the United States has flown 35 to 40 F4 Phantom jet fighter bombers to Israel. Israeli cargo planes and at least one ship have loaded in the United States with arms for Israel. The ship carried three A4 Skyhawk tactical bombers, smaller than the F4 and unable to be flown to Israel, lashed to its deck.

Through yesterday, the fourth day of the U.S. airlift, officials said U.S. Air Force C141 and C5 jet transports had delivered some 1,830 tons of tanks, ammunition and missiles to Israel.

Yesterday marked the eighth day of the Soviet airlift, and officials said 350 Russian flights had provided the Arabs with about 5,500 tons of arms.

Officials also reported the reenforcement of the Soviet fleet in the Mediterranean to an unprecedented force for some 70 warships. They said there were indications the Russians had launched a sealift of arms —including tanks and the first replacement planes sent to the Arabs—to supplement their airlift effort.

Demos Will Scrutinize Second Spot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public hearings by a Democratic Party study group on how to select "the most qualified person available" for vice president will begin Nov. 7, and will probably coincide with congressional confirmation hearings on Vice President-designate Gerald Ford, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey said today.

The Minnesota Democrat, vice president under Lyndon B. Johnson, will chair the hearings of the Democratic National Committee's Commission on Vice Presidential Selection.

The commission's main concern, Humphrey said, "is how to have the most qualified person available to assume the powers and responsibilities of the presidency, should such an emergency arise." The liklihood of simultaneous party and congressional hearings "may, in fact, have a beneficial effect," said Humphrey. "Public awareness of the importance of how vice presidential nominees are chosen certainly is at the highest level in recent years and perhaps since the birth of the Republic."

Previous hearings were held this year in Boston and New Orleans.

The 1968 Democratic presidential candidate urged the Republicans to conduct a similar study of reforming the vice presidential selection process before its 1976 national convention.

Case Sent To Superior Court

A San Francisco woman, alleged to have stabbed her father, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court, charged with attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon.

Judge Robert A. Smallman of municipal court on Monday ordered Carolyn Janice Maxwell, 30 to appear Oct. 29 after ruling there is enough evidence to hold her.

She is accused of assaulting her father, John Crain, 56, of Strawberry, during an argument at his house Oct. 2.

Sea Ranch House Plan Is Rejected

SAN DIEGO (UPI) —The California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission yesterday rejected an appeal for a single dwelling home in Sonoma County's scenic Sea Ranch development.

The commission voted 10 to 0 against Dr. Joseph Picchi's appeal to the North Ventral Regional Commission action which ruled against his plans to build a home in the division.

Robert Mendelsohn, speaking as a state commissioner and representative of the regional commission, characterized the proposed two-bedroom house between California Highway 1 and the Pacific Ocean as a potentially adverse precedent.

Past precedent and any future cumulative effect would destroy the scenic value of the Sea Ranch coastline, Mendelsohn argued in opposing any commission action which could be seen as encouraging building in the area.

The commission staff said there were about 300 homes in the development now but that if present trend continues and all lots were built upon, there would be 4,000 homes, making Sea Ranch the largest coastal community between San Francisco and Eureka.

In the only other appeals matter in the relatively slow moving meeting, the commission voted 9 to 1 for a 346-unit condominium development in San Diego Loma Portal area.

Platform Shoes Termed Unsafe

CHICAGO (UPI) — Platform shoes are unsafe, says the American Medical Association, and wearers, both men and women, should walk slowly and carry a health insurance card.

The AMA said: "If you insist on following the extreme styles...which elevate the wearer from 3 to 7 inches off the ground...be prepared to fall down. Hard. With a sprained ankle or a broken bone as a result. Plus skinned knees, elbows and hands."

The association said no statistics were available "but there's no doubt that physicians everywhere are seeing more patients with injuries."

Insurance Plan To Be Aimed Aiding The Poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Department of Health, Education and Welfare will propose a national health insurance plan next week which would compel employers to offer health insurance costing an average $600 each to 39 million families.

Under the plan poor, unemployed, disabled or otherwise uncovered persons would be eligible for health insurance subsidies under a Government Assurance Plan that would replace the federal-state Medicaid program for the needy, one of the plans architects said yesterday.

HEW will not recommend a financing method but will present several options when the health insurance plan is presented at a meeting of President Nixon's cabinet, the official said. These include but are not limited to taxes on health insurance, increased income for Social Security taxes and a requirement that states pay part of the GAP subsidies.

Other key elements of the proposal described by the HEW health official:

The Standard Employer Plan would cost an average of $600 per family with employers paying 75 per cent of the premium and workers 25 per cent. Families could turn down the insurance coverage, but employers would have to offer it. Or families could accept and supplement it with other insurance.

An individual patient would have to pay the first $150 of medical costs each year with a cutoff of $450 per family and 25 per cent of the cost above that up to $1,500 in medical expenses.

All medical services covered by the plan would be free after the family had paid $1,500 in any year. The Administration's 1971 health insurance proposal to Congress put a ceiling on "catastrophic" protection of $50,000 per person.

The government would subsidize premiums for poor persons on a graduated scale that would provide full payment of premiums for families with less than $5,000 annual income and partial payment of premiums for families up to the $10,000 income level.

Benefits covered on a cost-sharing basis would include hospitalization, most doctors' services, some mental health care, limited dental services and out-patient prescription drugs.

Insurance companies would provide medical credit cards which persons could use to buy health services without exchanging money. The patient would present his card, for example, to a doctor or hospital which in turn would bill the insurance company. The insurer would reimburse the doctor and would bill the patient for his share of the cost.

Promotional Contest For Library

A hippopotamus (a man in costume and not a live animal) will greet people at the Bon Air Shopping Center, in Greenbrae from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday as part of a promotional campaign for the Larkspur Library.

Librarian Richard A. Kilbourne said Ross Valley residents ages 5 to 14 are being asked to name the hippo which has been adopted as the library mascot. Library representatives also distributed hippo masks in elementary schools this week to promote the new mascot.

Kilbourne said prizes of $10 for first, $5 for second and $3 for third will be given to winners of the naming contest at the library's open house Nov. 4. Judging will be by representatives from the San Francisco Zoo, which may use the name for a hippo born at the zoo in the future, according to Kilbourne.

Dallas Police Chief Resigns

DALLAS (UPI) — Police Chief Frank Dyson, whose officers charged last summer that he did not do enough to protect them during a riot, quit yesterday. He said the pressures of his work were interfering with his personal life.

"I feel at this time I should step down," Dyson, a 23-year veteran of the force, said at a hastily called news conference. "My family and I discussed it and we think it best."

Dyson, 47, was a target of both internal and external criticism in his four years as law enforcement chief of the nation's eighth largest city.

Trial Set On Theft Charges

A jury trial for Frederick Benjamin Casini, 18, of Kentfield, on a misdemeanor burglary charge, is set to begin Oct. 25 in Marin Municipal Court.

He is charged with helping steal nine cases of beer and wine from a Seven-11 store in Corte Madera June 30.

A second 18-year-old, Michael Norman Lumberg, of no known address, pleaded guilty and was given 30 days in jail and two years' probation by Municipal Judge David R. Baty.

ART REVIEW

Variety Is Theme Of Purchase Awards From Recent Festival

By ADA GARFINKEL

An attractive young woman with a Byzantine halo of gold?

A life-sized baby doll in the same room with a pair of wrestlers?

And how is it possible to look down into a chimney and still see the sky?

Strange questions? Not when seen in the context of the current exhibit mounted in the third floor foyer at the Marin Civic Center.

Selected by the jury for purchase awards from the San Francisco Art Festival (Sept. 19-23), each item in the exhibit presents a unique point of view, focusing both on the outer world and the realm of fantasy, or combining past and present.

Two of the more enigmatic works are Matt Glavin's "Wake of the Wake" and Dale Erickson's "Grassprint No. 3." Both dwell on expansion of space beyond traditional perspective views.

Glavin's collage-drawing is a delicate, understated diagram of angles and vectors and a diamond-shaped, dome-like form with softly chalked radial lines which form a cross. There is a feeling of spatial ascension — as if one could reach up and touch the sky.

Erickson's print builds up gigantic blades of grass around an open, brick-lined cube suspended (like a space ship) by cables which seem to lead to nowhere. Through an opening looking downward into the chimney-like form, there is a bit of bright blue sky and fleecy white clouds.

Cleveland Bellow's trisected "Nimba Madonna" combines antiquity and abstract art in his profile portrait of a young black woman with a medieval golden halo framing her Afro coiffeur, and supported by quarter-section bands of rainbow colors.

Anton Gintner's "Herman Safe Co.," painted in oil on paper, is a vista of San Francisco on a quiet, sunny afternoon seen from the vantage point of the shipping entrance. Large flat areas of adjoining building walls are enlivened by the quick rhythms of bay windows, overlapping slate-roof tiles, and a mosaic of warm shadows. A light standard in the extreme foreground anchors the scene in place and lends an invisible spatial arc to the clear horizon in the distance.

At the other end of the maximum-minimum scale, Robert Fried's monochromatic print describes the intricate network of a single loop of rope as if it were seen through a magnifying lens. The frayed ends and the heavy texture of the rope and the grainy consistency of the corkboard upon which it rests are strangely at variance with the small, stylized red dragon licking his paw in the upper left corner. But perhaps that accounts for Fried's title: "Pre-Columbian."

"Sun Queen" by April Watkins, is a hanging quilt with an appliqued seated figure of a young black woman whose features and crown-like hair arrangement is reminiscent of Ethiopian royalty. Her azure blue lurex blouse against the crimson background add to this conjecture.

A social lament is uttered by Ralph McNeil in "Herd Worship" in which a huge, nude doll shares the cramped room corner with a miniature "Superman," a pair of brawny wrestlers on the television screen, and several vacuous "pin-up" portraits.

There are 12 items in the show. A steel pipe and plastic sculpture designed for a fountain is not included because of installation difficulties.

This exhibit may be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Oct. 26.

Proposition 1 Not Just A Tax Shift

Only by curbing government spending can taxes be reduced. Anything else merely transfers the tax grab from one pocket to another.

This being obvious, the question arises: Will the California constitutional amendment which is Proposition 1 on the Nov. 6 special election ballot do the job?

PROPOSITION 1, the outgrowth of a study by a committee of economists appointed by Gov. Ronald Reagan, proposes to limit state spending to a fixed percentage of the total personal income within California. It would reduce this percentage by one-tenth of one per cent each year until it reaches 7 per cent (it is now 8.3 per cent).

This would not, however, decrease the total amount of state government spending. Because the total personal income in California increases each year, the state could spend more each year — but it would not be allowed to increase its spending quite as rapidly as personal incomes increase.

This would reverse the trend of recent years. In the past seven years, according to figures from the U. S. Department of Commerce and the governor's economic report, state spending has increased by 81 per cent while total personal income has increased by only 61 per cent. Thus the state has taken a bigger share of our money each year in taxes. The share it takes has outrun inflation and economic growth combined.

State government has not been alone in this. The share of our incomes taken by local jurisdictions has mounted even faster. But that was brought under control by adoption last year of Senate Bill 90, placing a lid on tax rates of cities, counties and special districts and tying school taxes to the amount spent per pupil. These restrictions, except on schools, would be placed in the constitution by Proposition 1. The school district controls would remain in the statutes where they are now.

IF PROPOSITION 1 is approved, these things will happen:

1. State spending cannot increase as rapidly as it has in recent years.

2. Local government spending will remain under the controls now in the statutes.

This will mean that, while taxes may increase, the portion of every dollar earned that must go for taxes will decline somewhat — not a lot, but some.

Since the proposition does not change the controls on local taxes, and since it mandates that any new costs placed on local jurisdictions by the state must be paid from state funds, it cannot produce higher local taxes than we would have without it.

Since it limits state taxes to a fixed percentage of total personal incomes, it cannot result in the state tacking on new taxes to pay for any costs the legislators would like to shift onto the cities and counties — as can be done as the law now stands.

THEREFORE, Proposition 1 is not a shift of tax from one jurisdiction to another.

It is a curb on government spending. And that is really the only way to reduce taxes.

Will it work? Theoretically, it will. Of course, we can't be sure until it's tried.

But we know for sure that the present system merely results in higher and higher taxes.

Reagan's Phone Message Brightens Up Campaigning

By EARL G. WATERS

Regardless of the outcome of Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax initiative in the forthcoming November election, it seems about to produce an entirely new campaign technique.

This is the taped "personal" telephone call which is being used to promote support for the governor's tax limitation measure.

In an operation somewhat resembling the boiler room tactics of high-pressure sales organizations, a battery of telephone operators, all volunteers, work busily from morning till night dialing voter households.

Upon answering the phone the voter is greeted with "This is Governor Reagan . . . " The taped conversation continues with an apology for the fact it is taped and the explanation that he is trying to reach every voter in the short period of time before the election.

After making a brief but effective campaign pitch, the tape concludes with a plea for help in getting out the vote and asking the listener to give his name to the operator monitoring the call.

THE IDEA SEEMS one of the brightest innovations in campaigning to hit the scene since the old-fashioned political picnis and parades went out of style.

While it has been used successfully in a couple of local campaigns within the state, Reagan's adaptation marks its first use in a statewide effort.

It is bound to catch on and be widely used in campaigns next year.

Campaigning prior to the radio and television was a matter of personal contact. Candidates staged political rallies and enrolled volunteers to ring doorbells throughout the precincts. The candidates themselves endeavored to make as many door-to-door calls as possible.

Before women's suffrage, old-time politicians campaigned the saloons heavily, buying beers for everyone and handing out campaign cards.

With the event of radio, first used in a national campaign unsuccessfully by Al Smith and four years later victoriously by Franklin Delano Roosevelt, campaigning started its drift away from the personal contact.

Television brought even bigger changes. It also started campaign costs soaring. But, like radio, it removed the candidate from personal contact. And, as Harry Truman proved in his now-famous "whistlestop" tour around the nation, there is no real substitute for meeting people face to face in a campaign.

FORMER SPEAKER Jesse Unruh, a master of campaign organizing, gained his most significant victories by use of volunteer door-to-door precinct workers, often defeating others with more money to spend who relied on radio and television.

TV is a proven asset in a national or statewide campaign. Still it often lacks the warmth of human contact. And its effectiveness diminishes and its relative costs zoom in more localized races. In legislative contests, too great a percentage of the viewers live outside of the district. It is a shotgun approach.

So the taped telephone should be a godsend. It is inexpensive. It is almost as good as a personal contact. And, like a rifle, it can be aimed directly on just those voters the candidate wants to reach.

Why Burn All Those Lights At Civic Center?

Considering the energy crunch, I would think that more attention could be given to conserving electricity at the Civic Center.

Friday evening I drove through the Civic Center at 7 p.m. All the lights available in both wings lighted the building. It was beautiful, but unnecessary for the few people on hand using the building.

Again, I drove through at 9 p.m. and all the lights were still on.

It is reasonable to me that sections of the Civic Center not in use could and should have the lights turned off.

Economy is in itself a source of great revenue — Seneca.

UBAC Optimistic For Campaign Success

I was tremendously pleased to see the editorial on UBAC, which recently appeared in the Independent-Journal. This sort of cooperation does much to insure the success of our campaign in 1973. I know that there is always tremendous competition among all sorts of organizations and projects for news coverage, we do, therefore, really appreciate this generous assistance.

At the moment we are optimistic — the campaign organization is good, and we have enjoyed great staff help under the leadership of Frank Fogarty.

Exercising Judgment —And Censorship

How do you reconcile your editorial today (Oct. 10) on the evils of censorship (which incidentally is an excellent one) with your campaign to purify the libraries of the Fairfax School District.

M. H. DURR

Fairfax.

(The answer is simple. We do not believe in censorship. Neither do we believe that just anything should be given to pupils in school under the guise of education. Surely reader Durr would not suggest that all the books and other writings which may be in adult libraries should be handed out to children 10 to 12 years old. — Editor)

Bus Shelter Design Invitation To Vandals

Unbelievable is the only word I can use to describe the proposed Golden Gate Transit bus stop shelters recently pictured in the I-J. I can see those unfortunates who seem to delight in vandalism rubbing their hands with glee in anticipation of the arrival of these "art works". Surely weathered redwood siding, or some similar material could be made every bit as attractive, much safer, and undoubtedly at a lower cost. If visibility of oncoming buses is the reason for the transparency, a computer to sense their arrival could probably be installed for something less than glass replacement expenses, alone.

As a regular bus commuter, using one of the many unsheltered bus stops, I say let us be more practical and install many inexpensive shelters where they are needed, rather than a few showplace potential public nuisances. With today's rising costs, I wonder how long we can continue to live in a gold-plated world.

Personal Freedom Important To All

A copy of your editorial of Sept. 20, in the Independent-Journal which deals with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and San Rafael Elks Lodge has been sent to me by Col. Walter Filler.

In my estimation this is as fine an article on personal rights that could be written by anyone. If Americans start to relinquish even the smallest personal right, it will not be long before none will be free regardless of race, creed, color or sex. Numerous forces in our country are constantly chipping away at our freedoms with the applause of world-wide communism. The loss of any right, however small, is one more wedge driven to divide and conquer. How long is it going to take for Americans to wake up and look through the smoke screen at what is happening to us? When I speak of Americans I mean every race, color and creed that ever lived on this great land and worked to make it the greatest nation on earth.

True, there has never been a perfect government on this earth and as long as man rules there never will be, that's human frailty. So we must, every last one of us, work hard to make America as good as our abilities will allow.

Thank you for your "blow for freedom."

Why Look Elsewhere If Officers Qualified?

A recent article by Bryce Anderson reflecting upon the new promotional criteria for the position of deputy police chief in San Rafael is noteworthy.

The fact that the city administration has up-graded the requirements for deputy chief is commendable. It reflects and demonstrates a professional response to the recommendations made by the President's Crime Commission in 1967 and the more recent recommendation offered this year by the Commission on Justice Standards and Goals. Both commissions indicated the urgent and relevant need to begin making higher education a part of the formal requirement for police personnel. The fact that the City of San Rafael has now included this prerequisite in the job requirement for deputy chief indicates a genuine desire on the part of city management to make the San Rafael Police Department more progressive and professionally oriented not only for the present but most certainly for the future.

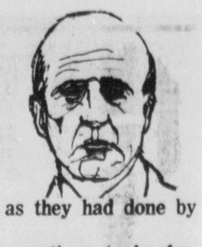

Along with the up-grading of the educational prerequisite for the position of deputy chief there was also an elimination of the traditional residency requirement. This means that any police officer in California who meets the formal prerequisites is eligible to make application. This fact is unfortunate. In many respects it discriminates against the hard-working and industrious officers within the San Rafael Police Department who have expended the time and energy to professionally prepare themselves for promotion and advancement.

If the prerequisites for the position of deputy chief are valid and if there are eligible personnel within the San Rafael Police Department, why is it necessary to go outside?. . . If there are qualified and competent personnel within the San Rafael Police Department it would be more prudent and economically sound to limit the applications to people who have made the San Rafael Police Department their police career.

Southeast Asia Less Turbulent Than During American Bombing

Nine weeks ago American bombers dropped their last strings of bombs around Phnom Penh amidst gloomy forecasts about the results.

President Nixon declared the bombing halt imposed by act of Congress "undermines the prospect of world peace by raising doubts in the minds of both friends and adversaries concerning the resolve and capacity of the U.S. to stand by international agreements . . . "

Obviously, nine weeks is not enough time to permit any final appraisal of the results of ending the bombing.

There may be a revival of hostile military pressure on the Lon Nol forces inside Phnom Penh at any moment. The rainy season is still impeding military operations. But . . .

SINCE THE BOMBING ended the Cambodian army has done more than ever before and scored its first successes. It won a hard-fought battle for the provincial city of Kompong Cham.

Communist rebels staged a heavy attack there beginning on Sept. 4 and soon overran most of the city. By Sept. 11 reinforcements from Phnom Penh arrived and recaptured all the lost ground. Kompong Cham is in government hands as this is written.

At the time the bombing stopped Phnom Penh was a besieged city. Today the siege line is broken and farther away.

Supplies come through regularly by river and sporadically by land over Route 4 from Sihanoukville. The city is under less pressure and certainly seems in much less danger than when the bombs were falling.

IN LAOS, fighting has died down and a curious mixed settlement seems to be operating with, as yet, no major disadvantage to government forces favored by the United States.

The royal Laotians seem to be doing as well by their wits as they had done by American bombs.

In Vietnam there continue to be frequent fights over particular strong points, bad junctions and possible valuable villages. Yet there has been no major change in the situation there.

The government of President Thieu in Saigon seems to be more firmly in control of the bulk of the population of South Vietnam than ever.

Enemy forces are in firm control of the mountain spine of the peninsula and could perhaps launch an offensive in the dry season ahead.

But there is no evidence that they are preparing a major assault. American intelligence sources think they are more interested in consolidating present holdings than in reaching for more.

THE NEWS SPOTLIGHT in world affairs has shifted away from Southeast Asia. Saigon is almost a forgotten word.

The immediate center of concern is now the Middle East and the new round of fighting between Israelis and Arabs.

This issue could threaten detente between Moscow and Washington, but President Nixon has exchanged messages with Leonid Brezhnev in his effort to defuse the crisis.

Before the fighting began, the Israelis and Russians had been in contact with each other along the sidelines.

It had seemed that diplomatic relations between them might be resumed. If they were, the subject of exit visas for Jews would naturally become a matter for direct negotiation between Israel and the Soviet Union.

That would let the United States out from in between. It would ease the way for the continuation of President Nixon's detente with the Soviet Union.

All in all the situation in Indochina has faded into the background.

42,500-Mile Interstate System Comes To The End Of Its Road

By ROBERT F. BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Interstate Highway System is coming to the end of its 42,500- mile long road.

First proposed to Congress in 1955 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, 98 per cent of the coast-to-coast, border-to-border system has either been completed or is under construction.

The final bill for: $76 billion.

WHAT DID THE MONEY buy? Backers of the system praise it as the finest highway system in the world. Critics claim it is simply a government-fed goose that laid golden eggs for the highway lobby.

When the last mile is paved in the early 1980s, enough concrete will have been poured to build six sidewalks to the moon.

Put another way, the pavement used in the system, if put into one parking lot, would be more than 20 miles square and more than half the cars in the United States could be parked on it.

The tar and asphalt would be enough to pave driveways of 35 million homes in suburbia. And enough dirt and rock was excavated to cover the state of Connecticut knee deep. Over 14,000 interchanges will have been built and the land used for the rights of way totals 1.7 million acres.

TRANSPORTATION SECY. Claude S. Brinegar earlier this month termed the system "the safest and best engineered highway network in the world."

Critics of the system scornfully refer to it as the biggest public works project in American history. President Nixon expressed still another view when he signed the $23 billion highway bill Aug. 13. He said he thought it was "boring" to drive on super highways.

But when Nixon put his signature on the bill it was acclaimed as the first major setback for the highway lobby since the Interstate Highway System was sold to Congress.

The reason is, the bill specified that for the first time, funds from the $4 billion Highway Trust Fund, which financed construction of the Interstate system, may be used for mass transit.

UNDER THE COMPROMISE, three-year bill, the fund will remain inviolate for the first year, but $200 million will be released during the second year for purchase of buses. During the third year, $800 million will be freed for buses, rail systems or subways.

"No longer must urban planners think 'just highways' . . . Now they will be able to consider tradeoffs to alternatives," Brinegar said.

But the highway lobby is not about to panic in fear its trust fund will eventually be taken over by mass transit advocates.

Keep in mind that even this small leak in the fund came only after a tough fight in Congress, a highway trust fund backer said. "Besides, any nation with 100 million vehicles is going to need highways in the future — lots of them."

Agnew's Plea For Martyrdom Transparent And Unconvincing

(Reprinted from Wall Street Journal)

We have always felt that the important part of our job was to illuminate public issues, not to parcel out blame among public men when it no longer bears on issues. Thus once Spiro Agnew was removed from office as vice president we were disposed to be generous — too generous, some have remarked.

We would be content to let it stand at that, but Mr. Agnew's trsnsparent plea for martyrdom Monday night calls for a few more words. If successful, it could do lasting damage to the body politic.

We doubt that it will be especially successful, for we have seldom heard a less credible position, particularly in explaining why the former vice president entered a plea of no contest in court after he had already resolved the constitutional crisis by resigning the vice presidency. He proclaims his innocence, but says he was willing to submit to conviction in court to spare his family agony and because he could not get a fair trial. Can anyone believe that this is the explanation of an innocent man?

Particularly so since Mr. Agnew's own statement in court so explicitly says, "I admit that I did receive payments during the year 1967 which were income taxable to me in that year and that I so knew." It is scarcely a defense to argue, as Mr. Agnew did in that court statement, that "in most instances" state contracts were awarded without any arrangement for kickbacks or that the contractors were competent, or that their payments did not influence Mr. Agnew's performance of his duties.

Nor will it do to suggest, as Mr. Agnew did Monday, that taking such money is wrong only in "the new post-Watergate political morality." It has always been wrong, though Mr. Agnew is not the first public figure to erect elaborate rationalizations for it.

"Severe punishment" will be the lot of any Ugandian who doesn't know the words and music of his national anthem; and to implement the edict President Idi Amin has promised to give individual auditions to all citizens.

Inasmuch as Uganda's population is 10,130,000, this chore adds up to cruel and unusual punishment for Idi.

We just hope the inability to sing all the words of our own national anthem never becomes a federal offense.

Those Catalogues Remind Us The Giving Season Is Near

The Halloween candy hasn't been purchased yet, but a sure harbinger that Christmas is on the way has begun to arrive.

Like the first robin of spring, the first Christmas catalogue plopped into the mail box the other day.

Then, in a manner more associated with ants or locusts than robins, others began to follow.

Some are modest affairs, with pictures of bathrobes and bedspreads and other such mundane things, but others are marvels of merchandising with fanciful gifts for the man or woman "who has everything."

THIS SEASON'S FAVORITE so far is a catalogue new to us from a New York City outfit. A massive computer somewhere deep in the Midwest undoubtedly spewed forth our address to the store. "Our electric closet" is the piece de resistance in the firm's offerings.

"An electric, push-button lazy Susan closet that keeps all your things organized" is not for anyone with a tiny bedroom, though, since it's 8 feet long, almost 5 feet deep and 7 feet tall. With a gold-finished mechanism one can push a button or an optional foot pedal, and the owner of this marvel can see his clothing and accessories whirl into view — something like at the dry cleaner's only in a fancier set-up.

For the man of the house, the same catalogue lists a wine vault "with electrically controlled temperature and humidity," which like the closet, plugs into any 110-volt outlet. One can get the wine cellar in a variety of sizes which hold anywhere from 138 bottles of wine to 1,858 — with prices ranging from $1,295 to $3,595.

(The electric closet, by the way, is a mere $2,500.)

IF ELECTRICAL MECHANISMS bore the favorite people on your gift list, maybe they'd like the "white nephrite jade libation vessel decorated with mythological hydras" from the Ch'ing Dynasty.

If this prize offering of a San Francisco store interests you, hurry up. It's listed as a "one only" item and "subject to prior sale." The price tag, by the way, is several times that of the electric closet, but then the recipient won't be bothered after Christmas by friends showing off their own jade libation vessels that are even bigger and better.

If these items are beyond your means, the catalogues have lots of less expensive items. There are vegetable dishes that heat themselves up, a tin woodman who sits on a bench and piggy banks that vibrate when you put a coin in, for starters.

And the Nieman Marcus catalogue hasn't even come yet.

Latest Milk Price Hike Should Last Some Time

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state-approved 10 cent increase in the retail price of a gallon of milk will be the last one for quite a while, the state's top agriculture official predicted yesterday.

"I think this will do it now," said C.B. Christensen, director of the Food and Agriculture Department.

Christensen said his department had to make a "bold move" of 10 cents per gallon because of "upward spiraling dairy feed costs" and to protect the state's $610 million a year milk industry."

"I really think this will do it now. Your grain prices are starting to level off. Your only problem is hay.

"We see down the line not too far in the future that those prices (feed costs) may drop off and we can then reduce the price of milk," he added. "It should be the last increase for quite a while."

The 10 cent hike, effective Nov. 1, was announced by the department Tuesday. It was the third granted this year under the state's Milk Stabilization Act and will bring the total price increase since the end of 1972 to 20 cents per gallon for all but a few counties.

The other two increases were four cents per gallon Feb. 1 and six cents Aug. 99 The 10 cent boost was the biggest ever granted by the department, a spokesman said.

Shoppers now pay from a low $1.16 per gallon "minimum" set by the state for the Sacramento and San Luis Obispo areas to a high of $1.34 per gallon in Siskiyou County.

Felony Drunken Driving Charge Is Dismissed

The temporary disappearance of a key witness has led a Marin Municipal Court judge to dismiss a felony drunken driving charge against Robert Kapua Kim, 29, of San Francisco.

But a deputy district attorney, Kathryn D. Mitchell, later said the man has been found in Missouri and will be flown to California to testify.

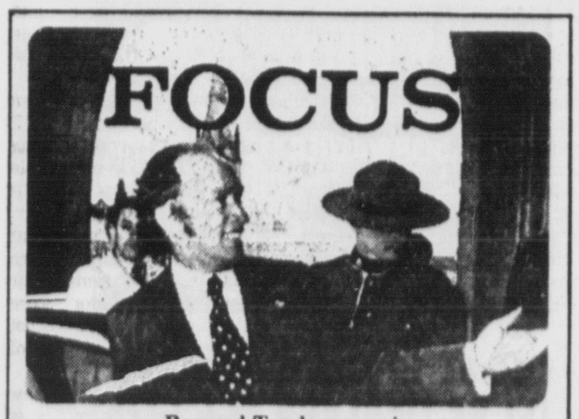

The witness is needed to prove Kim was the driver of a car which overturned and burst into flames on Alexander Avenue near Sausalito Sept. 10, killing Betsy C. Brigham, 23 of San Francisco.

Miss Mitchell said she will refile the felony charge.

Tiburon Bike Path, Beach Cleanup Off

The Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment has decided to cancel its annual Tiburon bike path and beach cleanup which was scheduled to be held Saturday.

Diana J. Bradley, publicist for the group, said the committee decided at its meeting Tuesday that the tide would not be low enough to allow participants to pick up beach debris and also learned that several committee members would not be able to participate.

Beyond Trudeaumania

When outspoken, charismatic Pierre Elliott Trudeau became Prime Minister of Canada in 1968, he enjoyed a period of wild popularity that came to be called "Trudeaumania." Today, as Trudeau celebrates his 54th birthday, the term is only a memory. His becoming a husband and a father may have had something to do with it, but a more likely reason is voter disenchantment with his policies regarding inflation and unemployment the last several years, as well as unhappiness with his policies regarding bilingualism. In last October's federal election, his party lost its parliamentary majority, and he now heads a minority government.

DO YOU KNOW — What's the name of the political party Trudeau heads?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Mrs. Meir grew up in Milwaukee.

Two Areas Of Petaluma Designated Study Zones

The Petaluma Planning Commission has designated two areas of East Petaluma as study zones.

Acting planning director Frank B. Gray said land on North McDowell Boulevard that had been designated as a future hospital site was changed to a study zone on the environmental design plan at the commission's Tuesday meeting.

Gray said geological tests have shown the area to be a poor place to build any multistory building and unsafe for use as a hospital.

The Petaluma Planning Commission also:

SUBDIVISION — Approved the final map for the third phase of Cambridge Square subdivision on Casa Grande Road as presented by the Wes Bailey Land Co.

OFFICES — Approved plans by Lieb and Quaresma architects for two office buildings at 1 Bodega Avenue.

OFFICES — Elected Rev. G. Roland Bond Commission chairman and Patricia Hilligoss vice chairman.

HOUSES — Approved plans by Marvin L. Klebe for four single-family homes at 324, 328 and 330 Vallejo Street.

In its September 1973 issue, Popular Science Magazine reported a road test comparing Peugeot with the Audi 100 LS, Volvo 144 ES and Saab 99 LE. Peugeot scored higher than all three in quietness and ride comfort. It equalled or surpassed its competitors in handling, maneuverability and fuel economy—24 miles per gallon. Standard on Peugeot: independent suspension, disc brakes, reclining bucket seats, Michelin steel-belted radial tires and, on the sedan, a steel sliding sunroof.

Proposition 1 Not Just A Tax Shift

Only by curbing government spending can taxes be reduced. Anything else merely transfers the tax grab from one pocket to another.

This being obvious, the question arises: Will the California constitutional amendment which is Proposition 1 on the Nov. 6 special election ballot do the job?

PROPOSITION 1, the outgrowth of a study by a committee of economists appointed by Gov. Ronald Reagan, proposes to limit state spending to a fixed percentage of the total personal income within California. It would reduce this percentage by one-tenth of one per cent each year until it reaches 7 per cent (it is now 8.3 per cent).

This would not, however, decrease the total amount of state government spending. Because the total personal income in California increases each year, the state could spend more each year — but it would not be allowed to increase its spending quite as rapidly as personal incomes increase.

This would reverse the trend of recent years. In the past seven years, according to figures from the U. S. Department of Commerce and the governor's economic report, state spending has increased by 81 per cent while total personal income has increased by only 61 per cent. Thus the state has taken a bigger share of our money each year in taxes. The share it takes has outrun inflation and economic growth combined.

State government has not been alone in this. The share of our incomes taken by local jurisdictions has mounted even faster. But that was brought under control by adoption last year of Senate Bill 90, placing a lid on tax rates of cities, counties and special districts and tying school taxes to the amount spent per pupil. These restrictions, except on schools, would be placed in the constitution by Proposition 1. The school district controls would remain in the statutes where they are now.

IF PROPOSITION 1 is approved, these things will happen:

1. State spending cannot increase as rapidly as it has in recent years.

2. Local government spending will remain under the controls now in the statutes.

This will mean that, while taxes may increase, the portion of every dollar earned that must go for taxes will decline somewhat — not a lot, but some.

Since the proposition does not change the controls on local taxes, and since it mandates that any new costs placed on local jurisdictions by the state must be paid from state funds, it cannot produce higher local taxes than we would have without it.

Since it limits state taxes to a fixed percentage of total personal incomes, it cannot result in the state tacking on new taxes to pay for any costs the legislators would like to shift onto the cities and counties — as can be done as the law now stands.

THEREFORE, Proposition 1 is not a shift of tax from one jurisdiction to another.

It is a curb on government spending. And that is really the only way to reduce taxes.

Will it work? Theoretically, it will. Of course, we can't be sure until it's tried.

But we know for sure that the present system merely results in higher and higher taxes.

Reagan's Phone Message Brightens Up Campaigning

By EARL G. WATERS

Regardless of the outcome of Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax initiative in the forthcoming November election, it seems about to produce an entirely new campaign technique.

This is the taped "personal" telephone call which is being used to promote support for the governor's tax limitation measure.

In an operation somewhat resembling the boiler room tactics of high-pressure sales organizations, a battery of telephone operators, all volunteers, work busily from morning till night dialing voter households.

Upon answering the phone the voter is greeted with "This is Governor Reagan . . . " The taped conversation continues with an apology for the fact it is taped and the explanation that he is trying to reach every voter in the short period of time before the election.

After making a brief but effective campaign pitch, the tape concludes with a plea for help in getting out the vote and asking the listener to give his name to the operator monitoring the call.

THE IDEA SEEMS one of the brightest innovations in campaigning to hit the scene .since the old-fashioned political picnis and parades went out of style.

While it has been used successfully in a couple of local campaigns within the state, Reagan's adaptation marks its first use in a statewide effort.

It is bound to catch on and be widely used in campaigns next year.

Campaigning prior to the radio and television was a matter of personal contact. Candidates staged political rallies and enrolled volunteers to ring doorbells throughout the precincts. The candidates themselves endeavored to make as many door-to-door calls as possible.

Before women's suffrage, old-time politicians campaigned the saloons heavily, buying beers for everyone and handing out campaign cards.

With the event of radio, first used in a national campaign unsuccessfully by Al Smith and four years later victoriously by Franklin Delano Roosevelt, campaigning started its drift away from the personal contact.

Television brought even bigger changes. It also started campaign costs soaring. But, like radio, it removed the candidate from personal contact. And, as Harry Truman proved in his now-famous "whistlestop" tour around the nation, there is no real substitute for meeting people face to face in a campaign.

FORMER SPEAKER Jesse Unruh, a master of campaign organizing, gained his most significant victories by use of volunteer door-to-door precinct workers, often defeating others with more money to spend who relied on radio and television.

TV is a proven asset in a national or statewide campaign. Still it often lacks the warmth of human contact. And its effectiveness diminishes and its relative costs zoom in more localized races. In legislative contests, too great a percentage of the viewers live outside of the district. It is a shotgun approach.

So the taped telephone should be a godsend. It is inexpensive. It is almost as good as a personal contact. And, like a rifle, it can be aimed directly on just those voters the candidate wants to reach.

Why Burn All Those Lights At Civic Center?

Considering the energy crunch, I would think that more attention could be given to conserving electricity at the Civic Center.

Friday evening I drove through the Civic Center at 7 p.m. All the lights available in both wings lighted the building. It was beautiful, but unnecessary for the few people on hand using the building.

Again, I drove through at 9 p.m. and all the lights were still on.

It is reasonable to me that sections of the Civic Center not in use could and should have the lights turned off.

UBAC Optimistic For Campaign Success

I was tremendously pleased to see the editorial on UBAC, which recently appeared in the Independent-Journal. This sort of cooperation does much to insure the success of our campaign in 1973. I know that there is always tremendous competition among all sorts of organizations and projects for news coverage, we do, therefore, really appreciate this generous assistance.

At the moment we are optimistic — the campaign organization is good, and we have enjoyed great staff help under the leadership of Frank Fogarty.

Exercising Judgment —And Censorship

How do you reconcile your editorial today (Oct. 10) on the evils of censorship (which incidentally is an excellent one) with your campaign to purify the libraries of the Fairfax School District.

M. H. DURR

Fairfax.

(The answer is simple. We do not believe in censorship. Neither do we believe that just anything should be given to pupils in school under the guise of education. Surely reader Durr would not suggest that all the books and other writings which may be in adult libraries should be handed out to children 10 to 12 years old. — Editor)

Bus Shelter Design Invitation To Vandals

Unbelievable is the only word I can use to describe the proposed Golden Gate Transit bus stop shelters recently pictured in the I-J. I can see those unfortunates who seem to delight in vandalism rubbing their hands with glee in anticipation of the arrival of these "art works". Surely weathered redwood siding, or some similar material could be made every bit as attractive, much safer, and undoubtedly at a lower cost. If visibility of oncoming buses is the reason for the transparency, a computer to sense their arrival could probably be installed for something less than glass replacement expenses, alone.

As a regular bus commuter, using one of the many unsheltered bus stops, I say let us be more practical and install many inexpensive shelters where they are needed, rather than a few showplace potential public nuisances. With today's rising costs, I wonder how long we can continue to live in a gold-plated world.

Personal Freedom Important To All

A copy of your editorial of Sept. 20, in the Independent-Journal which deals with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and San Rafael Elks Lodge has been sent to me by Col. Walter Filler.

In my estimation this is as fine an article on personal rights that could be written by anyone. If Americans start to relinquish even the smallest personal right, it will not be long before none will be free regardless of race, creed, color or sex. Numerous forces in our country are constantly chipping away at our freedoms with the applause of world-wide communism. The loss of any right, however small, is one more wedge driven to divide and conquer. How long is it going to take for Americans to wake up and look through the smoke screen at what is happening to us? When I speak of Americans I mean every race, color and creed that ever lived on this great land and worked to make it the greatest nation on earth.

True, there has never been a perfect government on this earth and as long as man rules there never will be, that's human frailty. So we must, every last one of us, work hard to make America as good as our abilities will allow.

Thank you for your "blow for freedom."

Why Look Elsewhere If Officers Qualified?

A recent article by Bryce Anderson reflecting upon the new promotional criteria for the position of deputy police chief in San Rafael is noteworthy.

The fact that the city administration has up-graded the requirements for deputy chief is commendable. It reflects and demonstrates a professional response to the recommendations made by the President's Crime Commission in 1967 and the more recent recommendation offered this year by the Commission on Justice Standards and Goals. Both commissions indicated the urgent and relevant need to begin making higher education a part of the formal requirement for police personnel. The fact that the City of San Rafael has now included this prerequisite in the job requirement for deputy chief indicates a genuine desire on the part of city management to make the San Rafael Police Department more progressive and professionally oriented not only for the present but most certainly for the future.

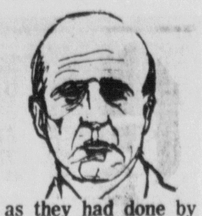

Along with the up-grading of the educational prerequisite for the position of deputy chief there was also an elimination of the traditional residency requirement. This means that any police officer in California who meets the formal prerequisites is eligible to make application. This fact is unfortunate. In many respects it discriminates against the hard-working and industrious officers within the San Rafael Police Department who have expended the time and energy to professionally prepare themselves for promotion and advancement.

If the prerequisites for the position of deputy chief are valid and if there are eligible personnel within the San Rafael Police Department, why is it necessary to go outside?. . . If there are qualified and competent personnel within the San Rafael Police Department it would be more prudent and economically sound to limit the applications to people who have made the San Rafael Police Department their police career.

Southeast Asia Less Turbulent Than During American Bombing

Nine weeks ago American bombers dropped their last strings of bombs around Phnom Penh amidst gloomy forecasts about the results.

President Nixon declared the bombing halt imposed by act of Congress "undermines the prospect of world peace by raising doubts in the minds of both friends and adversaries concerning the resolve and capacity of the U.S. to stand by international agreements . . . "

Obviously, nine weeks is not enough time to permit any final appraisal of the results of ending the bombing.

There may be a revival of hostile military pressure on the Lon Nol forces inside Phnom Penh at any moment. The rainy season is still impeding military operations. But . . .

SINCE THE BOMBING ended the Cambodian army has done more than ever before and scored its first successes. It won a hard-fought battle for the provincial city of Kompong Cham.

Communist rebels staged a heavy attack there beginning on Sept. 4 and soon overran most of the city. By Sept. 11 reinforcements from Phnom Penh arrived and recaptured all the lost ground. Kompong Cham is in government hands as this is written.

At the time the bombing stopped Phnom Penh was a besieged city. Today the siege line is broken and farther away.

Supplies come through regularly by river and sporadically by land over Route 4 from Sihanoukville. The city is under less pressure and certainly seems in much less danger than when the bombs were falling.

IN LAOS, fighting has died down and a curious mixed settlement seems to be operating with, as yet, no major disadvantage to government forces favored by the United States.

The royal Laotians seem to be doing as well by their wits as they had done by American bombs.

In Vietnam there continue to be frequent fights over particular strong points, bad junctions and possible valuable villages. Yet there has been no major change in the situation there.

The government of President Thieu in Saigon seems to be more firmly in control of the bulk of the population of South Vietnam than ever.

Enemy forces are in firm control of the mountain spine of the peninsula and could perhaps launch an offensive in the dry season ahead.

But there is no evidence that they are preparing a major assault. American intelligence sources think they are more interested in consolidating present holdings than in reaching for more.

THE NEWS SPOTLIGHT in world affairs has shifted away from Southeast Asia. Saigon is almost a forgotten word.

The immediate center of concern is now the Middle East and the new round of fighting between Israelis and Arabs.

This issue could threaten detente between Moscow and Washington, but President Nixon has exchanged messages with Leonid Brezhnev in his effort to defuse the crisis.

Before the fighting began, the Israelis and Russians had been in contact with each other along the sidelines.

It had seemed that diplomatic relations between them might be resumed. If they were, the subject of exit visas for Jews would naturally become a matter for direct negotiation between Israel and the Soviet Union.

That would let the United States out from in between. It would ease the way for the continuation of President Nixon's detente with the Soviet Union.

All in all the situation in Indochina has faded into the background.

42,500-Mile Interstate System Comes To The End Of Its Road

By ROBERT F. BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Interstate Highway System is coming to the end of its 42,500- mile long road.

First proposed to Congress in 1955 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, 98 per cent of the coast-to-coast, border-to-border system has either been completed or is under construction.

The final bill for: $76 billion.

WHAT DID THE MONEY buy? Backers of the system praise it as the finest highway system in the world. Critics claim it is simply a government-fed goose that laid golden eggs for the highway lobby.

When the last mile is paved in the early 1980s, enough concrete will have been poured to build six sidewalks to the moon.

Put another way, the pavement used in the system, if put into one parking lot, would be more than 20 miles square and more than half the cars in the United States could be parked on it.

The tar and asphalt would be enough to pave driveways of 35 million homes in suburbia. And enough dirt and rock was excavated to cover the state of Connecticut knee deep. Over 14,000 interchanges will have been built and the land used for the rights of way totals 1.7 million acres.

TRANSPORTATION SECY. Claude S. Brinegar earlier this month termed the system "the safest and best engineered highway network in the world."

Critics of the system scornfully refer to it as the biggest public works project in American history. President Nixon expressed still another view when he signed the $23 billion highway bill Aug. 13. He said he thought it was "boring" to drive on super highways.

But when Nixon put his signature on the bill it was acclaimed as the first major setback for the highway lobby since the Interstate Highway System was sold to Congress.

The reason is, the bill specified that for the first time, funds from the $4 billion Highway Trust Fund, which financed construction of the Interstate system, may be used for mass transit.

UNDER THE COMPROMISE, three-year bill, the fund will remain inviolate for the first year, but $200 million will be released during the second year for purchase of buses. During the third year, $800 million will be freed for buses, rail systems or subways.

"No longer must urban planners think 'just highways' . . . Now they will be able to consider tradeoffs to alternatives," Brinegar said.

But the highway lobby is not about to panic in fear its trust fund will eventually be taken over by mass transit advocates.

Keep in mind that even this small leak in the fund came only after a tough fight in Congress, a highway trust fund backer said. "Besides, any nation with 100 million vehicles is going to need highways in the future — lots of them."

Agnew's Plea For Martyrdom Transparent And Unconvincing

(Reprinted from Wall Street Journal)

We have always felt that the important part of our job was to illuminate public issues, not to parcel out blame among public men when it no longer bears on issues. Thus once Spiro Agnew was removed from office as vice president we were disposed to be generous — too generous, some have remarked.

We would be content to let it stand at that, but Mr. Agnew's trsnsparent plea for martyrdom Monday night calls for a few more words. If successful, it could do lasting damage to the body politic.

We doubt that it will be especially successful, for we have seldom heard a less credible position, particularly in explaining why the former vice president entered a plea of no contest in court after he had already resolved the constitutional crisis by resigning the vice presidency. He proclaims his innocence, but says he was willing to submit to conviction in court to spare his family agony and because he could not get a fair trial. Can anyone believe that this is the explanation of an innocent man?

Particularly so since Mr. Agnew's own statement in court so explicitly says, "I admit that I did receive payments during the year 1967 which were income taxable to me in that year and that I so knew." It is scarcely a defense to argue, as Mr. Agnew did in that court statement, that "in most instances" state contracts were awarded without any arrangement for kickbacks or that the contractors were competent, or that their payments did not influence Mr. Agnew's performance of his duties.

Nor will it do to suggest, as Mr. Agnew did Monday, that taking such money is wrong only in "the new post-Watergate political morality." It has always been wrong, though Mr. Agnew is not the first public figure to erect elaborate rationalizations for it.

"Severe punishment" will be the lot of any Ugandian who doesn't know the words and music of his national anthem; and to implement the edict President Idi Amin has promised to give individual auditions to all citizens.

Inasmuch as Uganda's population is 10,130,000, this chore adds up to cruel and unusual punishment for Idi.

We just hope the inability to sing all the words of our own national anthem never becomes a federal offense.

Those Catalogues Remind Us The Giving Season Is Near

The Halloween candy hasn't been purchased yet, but a sure harbinger that Christmas is on the way has begun to arrive.

Like the first robin of spring, the first Christmas catalogue plopped into the mail box the other day.

Then, in a manner more associated with ants or locusts than robins, others began to follow.

Some are modest affairs, with pictures of bathrobes and bedspreads and other such mundane things, but others are marvels of merchandising with fanciful gifts for the man or woman "who has everything."

THIS SEASON'S FAVORITE so far is a catalogue new to us from a New York City outfit. A massive computer somewhere deep in the Midwest undoubtedly spewed forth our address to the store. "Our electric closet" is the piece de resistance in the firm's offerings.

"An electric, push-button lazy Susan closet that keeps all your things organized" is not for anyone with a tiny bedroom, though, since it's 8 feet long, almost 5 feet deep and 7 feet tall. With a gold-finished mechanism one can push a button or an optional foot pedal, and the owner of this marvel can see his clothing and accessories whirl into view — something like at the dry cleaner's only in a fancier set-up.

For the man of the house, the same catalogue lists a wine vault "with electrically controlled temperature and humidity," which like the closet, plugs into any 110-volt outlet. One can get the wine cellar in a variety of sizes which hold anywhere from 138 bottles of wine to 1,858 — with prices ranging from $1,295 to $3,595.

(The electric closet, by the way, is a mere $2,500.)

IF ELECTRICAL MECHANISMS bore the favorite people on your gift list, maybe they'd like the "white nephrite jade libation vessel decorated with mythological hydras" from the Ch'ing Dynasty.

If this prize offering of a San Francisco store interests you, hurry up. It's listed as a "one only" item and "subject to prior sale." The price tag, by the way, is several times that of the electric closet, but then the recipient won't be bothered after Christmas by friends showing off their own jade libation vessels that are even bigger and better.

If these items are beyond your means, the catalogues have lots of less expensive items. There are vegetable dishes that heat themselves up, a tin woodman who sits on a bench and piggy banks that vibrate when you put a coin in, for starters.

And the Nieman Marcus catalogue hasn't even come yet.

Latest Milk Price Hike Should Last Some Time

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state-approved 10 cent increase in the retail price of a gallon of milk will be the last one for quite a while, the state's top agriculture official predicted yesterday.

"I think this will do it now," said C.B. Christensen, director of the Food and Agriculture Department.

Christensen said his department had to make a "bold move" of 10 cents per gallon because of "upward spiraling dairy feed costs" and to protect the state's $610 million a year milk industry."

"I really think this will do it now. Your grain prices are starting to level off. Your only problem is hay.

"We see down the line not too far in the future that those prices (feed costs) may drop off and we can then reduce the price of milk," he added. "It should be the last increase for quite a while."

The 10 cent hike, effective Nov. 1, was announced by the department Tuesday. It was the third granted this year under the state's Milk Stabilization Act and will bring the total price increase since the end of 1972 to 20 cents per gallon for all but a few counties.

The other two increases were four cents per gallon Feb. 1 and six cents Aug. 99 The 10 cent boost was the biggest ever granted by the department, a spokesman said.

Shoppers now pay from a low $1.16 per gallon "minimum" set by the state for the Sacramento and San Luis Obispo areas to a high of $1.34 per gallon in Siskiyou County.

Felony Drunken Driving Charge Is Dismissed

The temporary disappearance of a key witness has led a Marin Municipal Court judge to dismiss a felony drunken driving charge against Robert Kapua Kim, 29, of San Francisco.

But a deputy district attorney, Kathryn D. Mitchell, later said the man has been found in Missouri and will be flown to California to testify.

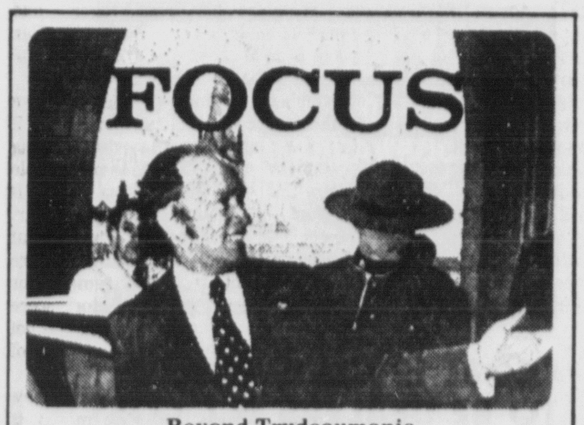

The witness is needed to prove Kim was the driver of a car which overturned and burst into flames on Alexander Avenue near Sausalito Sept. 10, killing Betsy C. Brigham, 23 of San Francisco.

Miss Mitchell said she will refile the felony charge.

Tiburon Bike Path, Beach Cleanup Off

The Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment has decided to cancel its annual Tiburon bike path and beach cleanup which was scheduled to be held Saturday.

Diana J. Bradley, publicist for the group, said the committee decided at its meeting Tuesday that the tide would not be low enough to allow participants to pick up beach debris and also learned that several committee members would not be able to participate.

Beyond Trudeaumania

When outspoken, charismatic Pierre Elliott Trudeau became Prime Minister of Canada in 1968, he enjoyed a period of wild popularity that came to be called "Trudeaumania." Today, as Trudeau celebrates his 54th birthday, the term is only a memory. His becoming a husband and a father may have had something to do with it, but a more likely reason is voter disenchantment with his policies regarding inflation and unemployment the last several years, as well as unhappiness with his policies regarding bilingualism. In last October's federal election, his party lost its parliamentary majority, and he now heads a minority government.

DO YOU KNOW — What's the name of the political party Trudeau heads?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Mrs. Meir grew up in Milwaukee.

Two Areas Of Petaluma Designated Study Zones

The Petaluma Planning Commission has designated two areas of East Petaluma as study zones.

Acting planning director Frank B. Gray said land on North McDowell Boulevard that had been designated as a future hospital site was changed to a study zone on the environmental design plan at the commission's Tuesday meeting.

Gray said geological tests have shown the area to be a poor place to build any multistory building and unsafe for use as a hospital.

The Petaluma Planning Commission also:

SUBDIVISION — Approved the final map for the third phase of Cambridge Square subdivision on Casa Grande Road as presented by the Wes Bailey Land Co.

OFFICES — Approved plans by Lieb and Quaresma architects for two office buildings at 1 Bodega Avenue.

OFFICES — Elected Rev. G. Roland Bond Commission chairman and Patricia Hilligoss vice chairman.

A Tradition Falls

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (UPI) - Another male tradition has fallen. A woman is president of the army's Command and General Staff College class. She is Lt. Col. Connie Slewitzke, an Army nurse. Though one of only five women in the class, she is head of a body of 1,000 students.

Peugeot. What makes this car so interesting to people who have looked at Audi, Volvo and Saab?

In its September 1973 issue, Popular Science Magazine reported a road test comparing Peugeot with the Audi 100 LS, Volvo 144 ES and Saab 99 LE. Peugeot scored higher than all three in quietness and ride comfort. It equalled or surpassed its competitors in handling, maneuverability and fuel economy—24 miles per gallon. Standard on Peugeot: independent suspension, disc brakes, reclining bucket seats, Michelin steel-belted radial tires and, on the sedan, a steel sliding sunroof.

Test results achieved at constant 45 mph. Roof rack on wagon and side molding optional.

TEACHER STRIKE ENDS

Ora Burgess, a teacher at Cass Tech — a Detroit area high school — is all smiles as she bursts out laughing for joy upon hearing the 44-day teacher strike is over. End of the strike came yesterday. Some 10,600 members of the Detroit Federation of Teachers walked off their jobs Sept. 4, giving some 270,000 students an extended vacation.

Group Is Organized In Support Of Water Bonds

A citizens group has been organized to support Measure E, the Marin Municipal Water District's $7.5 million bond issue to finance a Russian River supply project. The measure will be presented to district voters Nov. 6.

Arnold M. Baptiste, chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors, and Margaret B. Azevedo, a member of the county planning commission, are cochairmen of the Yes on E Committee.

A spokesman for the committee said that the district will face a real water shortage if new supplies are not developed. Already Marin Municipal is using about 25 per cent more than the amount of water it can expect its reservoirs to produce year in and year out, she said.

The group believes that Marin's water supply should not become a pawn in the debate over growth in the county. "It's primarily a case of providing an adequate water supply for existing needs. . ." Mrs. Azevedo said. "Our water deficit continues to grow even with a moratorium on connections and a (water) conservation program."

A spokesman said the Russian River is "the most economical source of additional water for Marin and would have a comparatively low impact on the environment."

The spokesman also pointed out that Measure E will have no effect on property taxes since the bonds will be paid from water district revenues.

Measure E has been endorsed by a majority of county supervisors and the City-County Planning Council. Members of the committee include Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., Roger Kent, Eugene Miller, Robert Roumiguiere, Wayne Wedell and June C. Weden.

Plans For Bridgeway Revamping Approved

Final design plans for the Bridgeway Improvement Project in Sausalito were approved last night by the planning commission.

A median strip for emergency vehicles from Princess Street to the middle of the block between Bay and Channel streets was included in the plan. The 11-foot-wide strip is expected to cost between $32,000 and $35,000, according to Donald Olsen and Associates, project designers.

The final plan involves only minor changes to Vina Del Mar Park. Some bushes and a war memorial at the front of the park will be removed and a new walkway installed to give passersby a better view of the park's Victorian fountain, according to assistant planner Jerry Cormack.

Several small planting areas along the downtown street were eliminated to reduce maintenance costs; commissioners decided against kiosks and bulletin boards and they agreed that bus stops should be widened.

The beautification project is expected to cost about $242,000, or about $130 per running foot. If the plan is approved by the city council, construction probably will begin late this month or in early November and should be completed by March, 1974. Commissioners concurred with staff that the project will not have a negative effect on the environment.

Plans to operate a restaurant at Gatsby's on Caledonia Street also were approved. Seating will be limited to 56 and adequate soundproofing and a vent to eliminate kitchen odors must be installed. No amplified music will be allowed at the establishment, which formerly was a jazz club and bar.

Commissioners also recommended to the county planning commission that plans to build a recording studio on land in county jurisdiction north of Wolfback Ridge and west of Highway 101 be approved if the remainder of the 21-acre parcel is left in open space. The studio would cover about four acres on land owned by Warren Glass adjacent to Sausalito's city limits, Cormack said.

Star Attends Film Festival

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —A black tie crowd who paid $50 each turned out last night for the opening of the 17th annual San Francisco International Film Festival.

They saw the world premier of "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams," starring Joanne Woodward who appeared for the showing at the Palace of Fine Arts.

Miss Woodward said earlier yesterday that she normally doesn't like publicity tours but felt the picture "needs to be exploited."

The doctor experiences a reliving of the past himself, an event that helps force the wife to consider others beside herself.

Actress Sylvia Sidney returns to the screen for the first time in 17 years to play Miss Woodward's mother.

$3 Million Seized In Illegal Drugs

CHICAGO (UPI) —Police seized about two pounds of cocaine and six pounds of heroin valued at $3 million in raids on a tavern and a residence last night.

Thirty-three men and five women were arrested in the raids which came after two months of surveillance at both South Side locations, police said.

Ex-Russian Army Officer Now Touring For Peace

By JEFF GREER

A former Russian Army officer who built himself into a college professor, newspaperman and world-travelling peace crusader visited Marin County this week to talk about the global future.

Dr. Nicholas T. Goncharoff was guest of honor Tuesday at a reception of the Marin County Young Men's Christian Association. He is director of international education and cultural affairs for the national YMCA and represents the international YMCA's branches in 86 nations, at the United Nations in New York City.

The 50-year-old Goncharoff, colorfully expressing his views in heavily accented English, believes strongly that all nations politicians should study huge capitalistic enterprises to learn from them.

"If people paid the attention to politics that they pay to preparation for the business world," international statesmanship would gain mightily, the visitor said. "A firm like Kaiser Industries can't allow anything but excellence" in its management training, he explained.

"The big corporations are multinational" but many countries still place nationalism above world progress, he charged.

Nationalism caused his own countrymen to reject him when he returned to Russia after years of absence, Goncharoff said.

He commanded a tank corps in Russia in the waning days of World War II, until he was captured by the Germans. In prisoner-of-war camps and later in the postwar refugee camps, he said, he was helped by multinational YMCA teams who gave the camp residents vocational training, tools to rebuild war-torn Europe and cultural and intellectual opportunities.

The ex-officer earned a doctorate in history and philosophy at the University of Munich. He studied in other universities in Germany and Switzerland, as well as taking postdoctoral studies at Columbia and Harvard universities and the New School for Social Research.

He taught on campuses, wrote for German newspapers, and was named international ambassador for the YMCA in 1953.

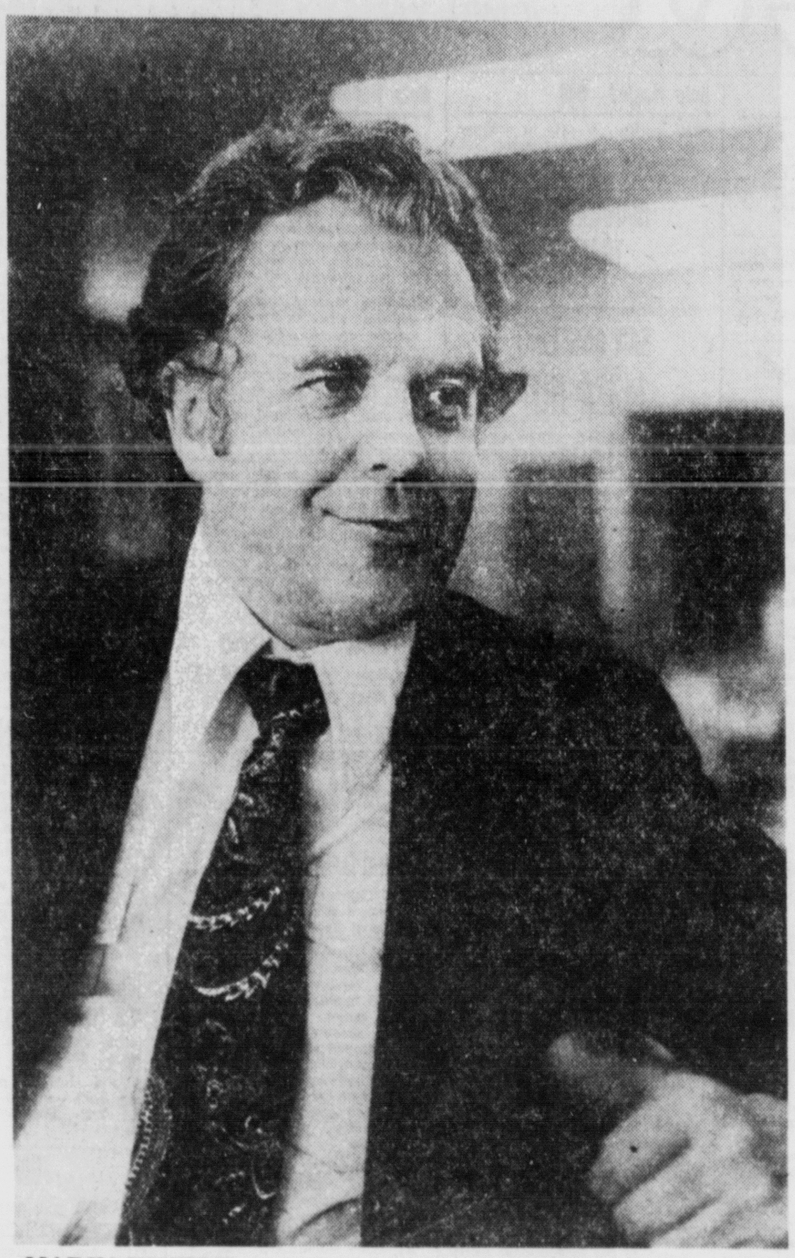

Then he revisited his communist homeland.

"The toughest thing was when I was interviewed by the Russian executives. There had been a change in my mentality.

"They called me 'a cosmopolite' . . . and that's not a good thing to the nationalistic mind," he explained.

Goncharoff said the late physicist Albert Einstein summed up the world's problems with a sentence — "with the split of the atom, everything changed except our thinking."

Western Civilization's 2,000-year-old pattern of dualistic "good-bad" thinking, Goncharoff claimed, is in conflict with the 6,000-year-old cultures of Asia and Africa, and few Westerners realize that now the world is divided not East-West, or U.S.-Russia, but into northern and southern hemispheres. In the north are the materialistic U.S., Europe, Japan and Russia; in the south are the "have not" masses of the "third World" who have been colonized by the northerners, but now demand their own life control, he said.

MARIN VISITOR — Dr. Nicholas T. Goncharoff, an executive with the national Young Men's Christian Association, believes Watergate and Agnew's resignation has sullied the United States' moral leadership in the world. He made his remarks during a visit in Marin this week.

Watergate, Agnew's resignation and the long, bloody Vietnam War sullied the United States' moral leadership in the world, the ex-soldier said.

But "the words of millions of people around a bipartisan cause could accomplish tremendous leadership," Goncharoff argued. "We should apologize for Watergate and the war and say, 'let's grow' " beyond the concepts of "loyalty only to 'Uncle Fritz, Uncle Sam, Uncle Ivan'."

"Remember, the government's money is the people's money managed by the government. We have the technological knowhow" to solve transit troubles, food shortages, possibly even the energy crisis, he said, if we realize "we are suddenly emerging into a new society which requires new ideas."

He siad, "I'm not married to the YMCA," but said he relishes his opportunity to head its international statesmanship programs. He takes national business, civic and education leaders into other nations to meet their leaders and try to solve problems cooperatively. In his work, he has talked with leaders of mainland China, India, Japan, and other nations all over the world.

He is visiting the San Francisco Bay Area as star speaker for the YMCA's "Week of International Understanding." To one service club, he tells his experiences with and hopes for the United Nations, another of the future of Africa, another his knowledge of the Middle East.

He called for the U.S. to demand that all powers let the United Nations halt the Arab-Israeli war, with peace keeping troops if necessary. He decried the feeling that "everybody's against the UN because they don't buy one side or the other. But the UN's not angels or devils. It reflects human beings" from more than 100 nations, trying to save the world, he asserted.

Too many nations' politicians, he said, still are using concepts that worked 200 years ago, but not today, in the face of overpopulation, pollution and the energy crisis.

"Big people knew the energy crisis was coming," he criticized, "but they said such a thing couldn't happen.

"Their confidence that 'something would turn up' " to solve it is woefully "romantic," the professor declared.

He said the YMCA is trying to find an answer with its international stress on opportunities for development of "mind, spirit and body." National governments and world churches should take more action to help cement the world into "one geographic unit" reaching for ideas "not to kill man by man or masses by masses. War is a product of man's mind and need not exist to solve man's problems," he said.

"We have made rockets capable of going 25,000 miles an hour, but our minds still go at a beautiful horse-and-buggy four miles an hour," Goncharoff said.

Body Of Larkspur Physician Recovered In San Pablo Bay

Coast Guard searchers recovered the body of Dr. John Banks Harris of Larkspur, nationally recognized liver expert, from the waters of San Pablo Bay at 10:15 a.m. yesterday.

About 12 hours earlier, Harris jumped from the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, according to the San Francisco coroner's office, which took charge of the body. Harris's station wagon was found in midspan, with its engine running and lights on. No note was discovered, the coroner's office said.

Harris's wife, Mayme, had alerted authorities, because she had lost sight of him while he was driving across the bridge, following her car at 10 p.m. Tuesday. She said she was concerned because the doctor had been despondent.

He had been on the staff of the University of California Medical Center for 12 years, and was assigned to the gastroenterology unit of San Francisco General Hospital. Staff officials there said Harris was nationally known for his research in liver metabolism.

Harris had been active in Peace and Freedom Party organization in the late 1960s.

He lived at 5 Monte Vista Avenue with his wife and their three children.

The funeral arrangements were pending today.

Dr. Gideon Y. Sorokin, a reserve lieutenant in the Israeli Air Force, will discuss the Mideast war in its aftermath at a dinner and seminar at 6 p.m. Sunday at Congregation Rodef Sholom, 170 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

His wife, Zohar, will perform songs of Israel, accompanied on the piano by Elsie Krinitzky.

Sorokin, a Marin veterinarian who returned from Israel 10 days ago, said he hopes many non-Jewish persons will attend.

Proceeds will go to the Jewish Welfare Federation's Israel emergency fund. Tickets will be available at the door.

Sanitary Board Eyes Service Charge

The Richardson Bay Sanitary District board is exploring a possible sewer service charge.

Eber D. Russell, board secretary, said that the board decided Tuesday to have staff members come back with information on such charges imposed in other sanitary districts.

Regular Service

All regularly scheduled Golden Gate Transit buses will remain in operation on Monday, Veterans' Day. Only special school bus service will be suspended, according to Bus Transit Mgr. H. Donald White.

Denial Is Made To Felony Charges

Felony charges of assault with a deadly weapon and possessing heroin for sale were denied yesterday in Marin Municipal Court by Joseph Hilliard Fusilier.

Judge David R. Baty set a preliminary hearing for Oct. 26 for Fusilier, 28, of Marin City.

According to Marin sheriff's deputies, Fusilier's wife, Susan, 19, told them her husband shot at her with a .22-caliber revolver during an argument Tuesday, but missed.

Deputies called to the home said they found a vial containing suspected heroin on a dresser.

Waldie Will Bring Campaign To Marin

Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-14th District, will bring his campaign for governor to Marin on Nov. 11.

The East Bay congressman will be at Temple Rodef Sholom in Santa Venetia from 1 to 3 p.m. The event is sponsored by the Marin County Citizens for Waldie Committee.

Bolinas Sewage Plant Will Need Four Ponds

Only four, not five, treatment ponds will be required for a Bolinas sewage system, directors of the Bolinas Community Public Utility District were told last night.

And the battle over the amount of acreage needed for the entire system took a new turn as district consultant William J. Oswald said state officials might approve funding for additional land because of requirements imposed after initial plans had been drawn up.

Oswald said a meeting with representatives of the State Water Quality Control Board, which will fund 87 per cent of most elements in an approved system, had resulted in agreement that one treatment pond could be deleted and another deepened.

Oswald, a professor of sanitary engineering at the University of California, supported the 95-acre purchase for the facility, which is now an issue on the Nov. 6 ballot. The property would cost $250,000.

"I have always recommended that you buy all this land," he said. "You cannot get too much in land disposal of waste."

Clarence L. Feusier, a leading proponent of a smaller land purchase, asked why Oswald had approved a proposal last year for a 52-acre site.

Because that was all that state funding allowed at that time, responded Oswald, adding that soil information which came in later had also made a larger site necessary.

The water quality control board has required that no trace of sewage leave the facility, in order to stop pollution of Bolinas Lagoon. It has also ruled that drainage areas downhill from the site must be tested to insure the requirement is met.

If the downhill lands are not purchased, said Oswald, the district would be in "a very vulnerable position" if the system did not work properly at all times. State guidelines of no percolation require an 80-acre site, he asserted.

State representatives had previously said that 52 acres were needed for the sewage site and that 38 acres would be eligible for funding, according to board clerk Lyman Robinson.

Board President William E. Niman estimated the top cost of the system at around $1.4 million, but added that no firm figure could be given until the amount of the final grant is known.

"If the extra land were just open space, we wouldn't buy it, now that the costs have come in," Niman said after the meeting. "But it's a necessary part of the sewer system. It is a requirement of the state agencies involved, although whether they will fund it is an open question."

Director Paul D. Kayfetz was absent.

The Bolinas Public Utilities Board also:

OVERSPENDING — Postponed discussion of a financial report which said the district had exceeded its budget by $7,662 in the past three months and predicted a deficit of $26,719 in a cash forecast through Dec. 30. The report, drawnup by Robinson, was submitted last week.

ROAD WEEK — Voted to pay $125 for rental of equipment used during a community program of road repairs.

TRAINING — Received a $4,000 proposal from Oswald to cover writing a manual on operation of the sewage plant, training operating personnel and supervising opening of the system.

Youth To Court Oct. 31 For Drug Violations

A preliminary hearing for a San Rafael teen-ager, accused of three felony drug violations, was set in Marin Municipal Court yesterday for Oct. 31.

David Edward Louis, 18, of 125 Robinhood Drive, is charged with possessing marijuana and two counts of possessing amphetamine for sale.

San Rafael police said Louis was the driver of a car which was stopped on Mission Avenue Sept. 23 for a traffic violation. More than 200 tablets later found to be amphetamine, along with $55 cash and a plastic bag of marijuana, were found in the car, police said.

On Oct. 3, Louis again was stopped for having a taillight out. Officers reported smelling marijuana in the car and asked Louis to remove his boots during a search.

Instead, Louis palmed a vial, then broke into a run and flung the bottle away, according to police. Retrieved, the vial was found to contain more amphetamine tablets, police said.

Alcatraz To Go Public On Oct. 26

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Infamous Alcatraz Island will open for the first time to the public on Oct. 26, the National Park Service said today.

Secretary of the Interior Rogers C. B. Morton will tour the island next Thursday at dedication ceremonies.

Reservations will be required for all tours, and will be handled by telephone only at Harbor Carriers' San Francisco headquarters.

Ferryboats, limited to 50 persons each trip, will depart daily every half hour from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. from Pier 43 near Fisherman's Wharf. Persons with reservations should be at the pier 15 minutes before departure, according to a spokesman for Harbor Carriers, which contracted with the government to provide transportation to the island.

Tours will take approximately an hour and 45 minutes, including 15 minutes each way on the boats, and be conducted by National Park Service guides. Each boatload will be split into two groups of 25 persons.

Adults will be charged $2, and children 12 and under $1. Children under 5 years of age will be admitted free. Supervisory Ranger Jerry Rumburg, however, cautioned that children under 5 may have difficulty on the steep stairs and could encounter safety problems such as broken glass.

Group rates for 25 or more persons are $1.75 for adults and 75 cents for children 5 through 12.

Rumburg also cautioned weather can be cool on the island, and suggested visitors bring light jackets.

The former prison fortress, the U.S. version of Devil's Island, is a part of the new Golden Gate National Recreation Area. The 22.5-acre rock has been closed to the public since it was ceded to the U.S. by Mexico in 1848.

It was used to confine Civil War and Indian prisoners and as a military disciplinary barracks until 1934. The U.S. Bureau of Prisons, responding to widespread public panic at the height of the gangster era, then took over the island and made it the maximum security jewel of the federal prison system.

It was supposed to be escape proof, but seven men managed to get off the island. Two were recaptured immediately, but the remaining five never were found.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy ordered the prison closed in 1963 because it needed $5 million in repairs and cost too much per convict to operate.

Except for the 19-month occupation by Indians from 1969 to 1971, the island has been vacant since the prison was closed.

The park service plans to conduct the tours for several years to give the public a chance to help decide how the island should be used. The cost of razing all structures has been estimated at $3 million.

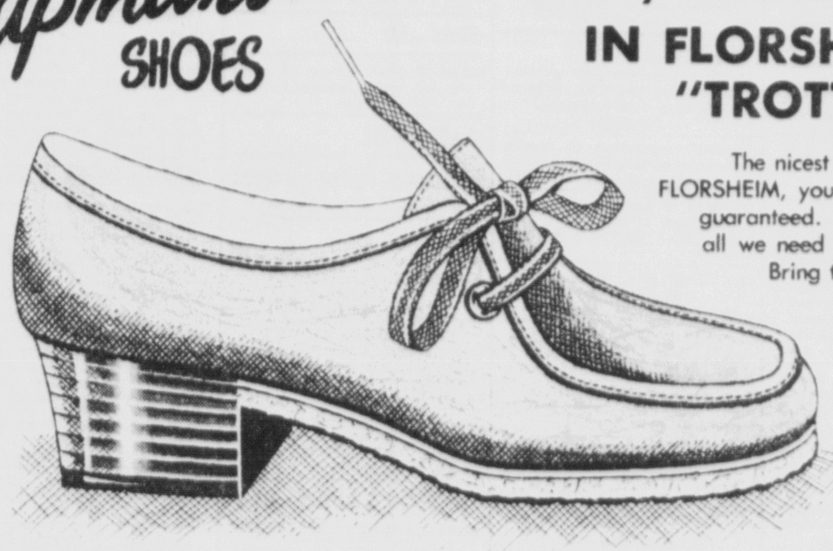

The tours will include the inside of the cellbock, mess hall and dreaded "D Block" for solitary confinement.

Court Ponders Raise Appeal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state Supreme Court has taken under submission an appeal by 135,000 state government workers to override a federally-ordered cutback in their pay raises this year.

Attorneys for the California State Employes Association and the attorney general argued yesterday that the federal government does not have legal authority under the U.S. Constitution to set salaries for state workers.

They also contended that the pay hikes, which averaged 12 per cent, were designed to catch up with workers in private industry and make up for previous increases vetoed by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Excavators Are 10,000 Years Late

McDERMITT, Nev. (UPI) — Archaeologists were delighted this summer when they uncovered a cave which had been one final refuge for the Indians as they retreated before the massive advance of the white man early this century.

But what they didn't know at the time they started their excavation was that the same cave had been used by prehistoric man some 10,000 years before.

Their discovery turned out to be another significant link in the long chain of man's history in the West's Great Basin.

The original discovery of the cave as a hideaway for the Indians had been regarded as rich enough in artifacts for the Nevada State Museum to receive a grant of $17,337 from the Max C. Fleischmann Foundation.

A team of seven excavators set up camp near the cave under the direction of Dr. Thomas Layton, an archaeologist who has worked or directed digs on a score of similar sites in the Great Basin over the past 10 years.

The site appropriately named the "Last Supper cave" and the dig was fruitful from its start. Tests proved the bones on the surface had been left there in the early part of the century. The skulls of livestock had been broken open to extract the brains, a known Indian technique.

The excavation turned up wooden pegs, some with bloodstains still on them, which had been used to stake the hides to the floor of the cave for drying. A piece of glass from a bottle made by a Kansas City company which went out of business in 1917 was found.

These finds jibed with history. Early in the 1900's the white man's assaults across northern Nevada had finally begun to deprive the Indians of their land and food sources. In desperation, the Indians rustled cattle and horses to feed their starving families, retreating to caves such as this one high in a secluded canyon in Humboldt County in northern Nevada. The site is still kept secret from the public to prevent vandalism.

In their routine excavations for more recent artifacts, the archaeologists found that all strata in the cave were not equal: below the surface Layton's crew uncovered a stratum containing freshwater mussel shells.

"This stratum was quite thick," explained Layton, "showing that the cave had been much more heavily used by man in prehistoric times than even during the Indians' last stand there.

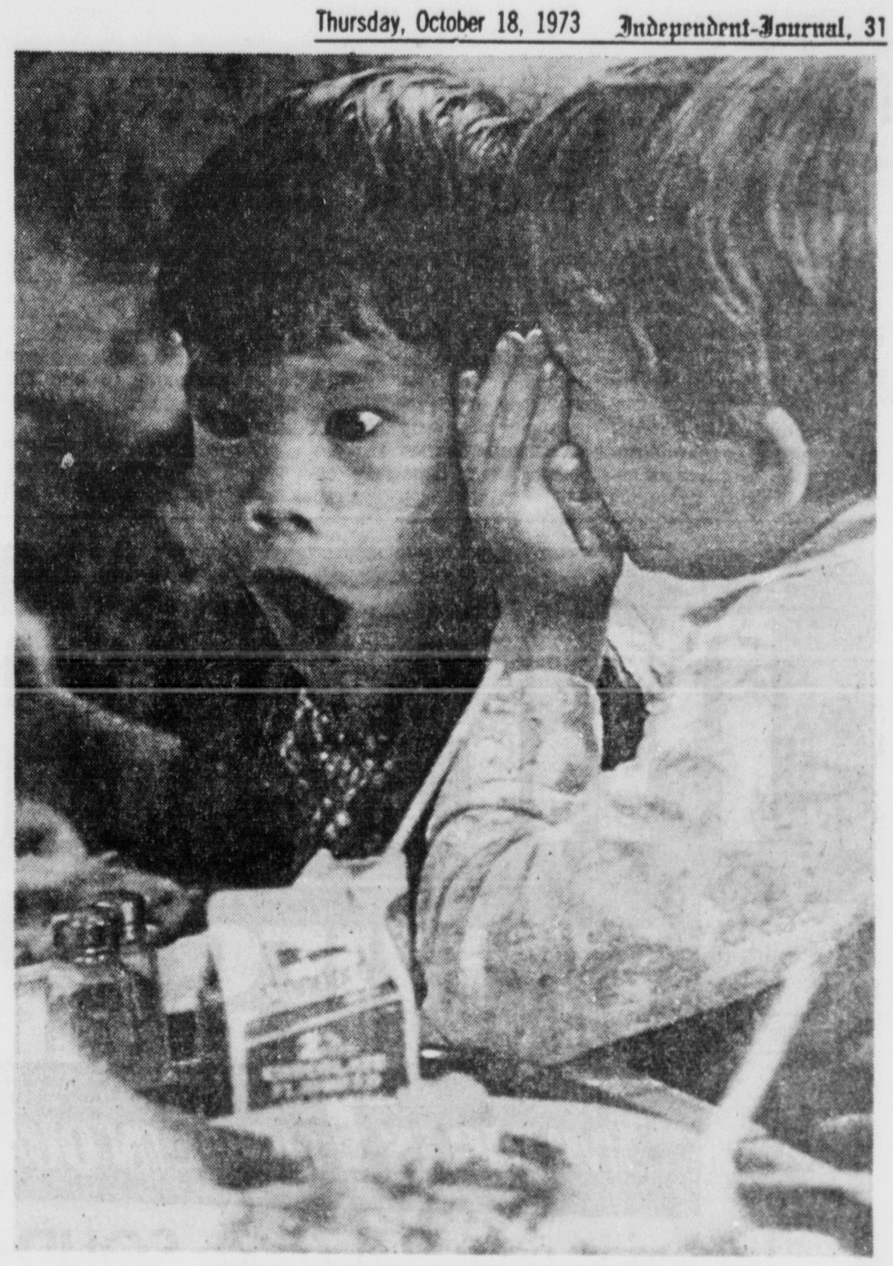

"Radiocarbon dates demonstrate that Indians who occupied the cave about 10,000 years ago harvested river mussels from a nearby creek," he said. "Stone scrapers and projectile points recovered are of types that until now have been found only on the ancient beach terraces of now-vanished Great Basin lakes.

"The abundance of river mussel shells from the bottom of the cave suggests a much wetter climate 10,000 years ago," Layton said.

One of the most important things about the Last Supper Cave is it is basically dry.

"Most of the caves have moisture," Layton said, "which rots cordage and basketry, and badly damages other materials. In this case, we have been able to find netting, arrow shafts and feathers, and even human feces which can be dated."

Layton says, "This is the first time we have excavated a dry cave in an upland area. That will give us an upland subsistence pattern of early man to complement our findings on lakeshore subsistence patterns. That will mean a tremendous stride toward completing the picture of Man's early development in the Great Basin."

Music Called The Key Link To Teen-Age Communication

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — From Little Richard's "hey bop-ree-bop" to the Beatles' "Hey, Jude," the words and tunes of popular music may be one of the best reflections of the thoughts and feelings of young Americans.

"Music is the communications medium of the young," in the opinion of Prof. Don Pember of the University of Washington School of Communications. "It is far more important than television or newspapers."

Assigned to teach a course in introductory communications, Pember found his students bored with normal lectures. Looking for something to spark interest, he developed a series of discussions on contemporary music which got his sleepy-eyed audience listening, talking and learning again.

Pember says similar moves are being made at other colleges and universities across the country. His new book, Mass Communications in America, due for December release, contains a major section on the development of popular music.

One of his major premises: Because they are reflective rather than creative, music lyrics should not be censored.

"I don't think song lyrics have created anything like the drug or counter-cultures," he said. "I don't believe in censoring lyrics. They can reflect and reinforce values, but I don't think they can create them.

"You can't put out a song saying we should all smoke cucumbers to get high and start a movement."

Pember, whose father played with the Glenn Miller band before World War II, first became interested in studying music as a communications medium when he worked as a disc jockey while attending Michigan State University.

Looking at the development of popular music over the past two decades, he says the lyrics of the '50s were mostly "frivolous." But they grew into the protest songs and folk era of the '60s, reflecting the growing anger, frustration and idealism of the young.

Currently, Pember says, the swing is to country and western music with its message of mundane, everyday living that says, "life is hard."

This fits right in with today's students, according to Pember, because they are "the most pragmatic I've seen ... They're interested in coming to college, getting a degree and getting a job."

The college teacher says he also sets out in his classes to do a bit of what he calls "mythdebunking" about the music and radio industries.

"Of all the media in America today, radio is the one young people listen to most," he said. "Yet the saddest thing of all is that this industry aimed at young people — one they feel they can trust, enjoy and share a comaraderie with — is just as geared to profit as television or anything else."

"The recording industry and the people who play records are very dependent on each other. They cannot exist without each other. And, with rare exceptions, in order for an artist to become popular, he has to get on radio.

"That's a hard fact of life," says Pember. "You can't live on truth and purity in music. There has to be some money. And this is why we have payola — why it exists and always will."

Pember says his students are too young to remember the payola scandals of 1959, when disc jockeys were accused of taking money and gifts for playing certain records.

"But when they do find out, they don't seem too concerned," he adds. "More important, they don't seem to worry about it. They don't have the moral indignation that people seemed to have back then. They seem to feel, 'So what? That's the way the system works.'"

New Program Will Keep Tabs On Health Program

The Marin County Family and Children's Services Advisory Committee has agreed to sponsor a new program to watchdog operation of the Marin County Health and Human Services Department.

The proposal calls for a special committee of welfare recipients to meet with new recipients and discuss problems encountered when they applied for welfare and other social services.

According to Donna Huckins, staff assistant to the advisory committee, the new program will have the two-pronged effect of helping new recipients over bureaucratic hurtles and pinpointing where those snags exist.

It will also watchdog how new recipients are treated by county employees.

"Like any other large department, we have people who bend over backwards to help and others who won't," Mrs. Huckins said.

She said interviews with the special committee will be voluntary for new recipients and will be held in confidence.

Mrs. Huckins stressed that the special committee will be run solely by recipients and not the health and human services department. It should be operational within a month, she added.

The advisory committee, which met Tuesday, also seated new member David R. Mayer, a San Rafael attorney, and heard a report from Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority.

Mayer is the court-appointed attorney for John Larry Spain, one of the San Quentin Six.

Iowa is the nation's leading corn production state.

Two Mountain Climbers Killed

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Two experienced mountain climbers were killed here when apparent equipment failure sent them tumbling 300 feet to the base of Glacier Point, park officials said.

Dead are David Bryan, 20, of Oceanside, and Michael Harrison, 24, of Bishop. They were in the process of putting up a new climbing route on Glacier Point yesterday when the accident occurred, rangers said.

The exact cause of the accident is still being investigated, officials reported.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The World Series is all even again due in large measure to a husky, heavy-set young man with curly red hair who believes like the late Vince Lombardi —"You've got to play with your little hurts."

Rusty Staub goes a little further.

He plays when he's hurt more than a little, and frequently he does even better than those who are completely healthy as was the case last night when he drove in five runs with a homer and three singles while leading the New York Mets to a 6-1 triumph over the Oakland A's.

Staub's heroics squared the series at two games apiece and made today's fifth contest a pivotal one in which left-hander Jerry Koosman will go for the Mets and Vida Blue, another southpaw, for the A's. (Game-time is 5:30 p.m. PDT.)

The contest will be a pitching rematch of Sunday's wild 12-inning spectacular, won by the Mets 10-7, that led to Mike Andrews' being banished by owner Charlie Finley. Koosman didn't survive the third inning and Blue didn't make it through the sixth so both are well rested.

"It's you guys who put all the pressure on this," Blue said to newsmen. "I just go out there and throw the ball. Why, you're all wondering how I'll pitch Staub. Well, I'll just put it over the plate and if he hits it, he hits it."

Blue, who became soured by his sudden rise to stardom in 1971 and the subsequent contract hassle he had with Finley, now acts blase about most things.

"If I don't pitch well," he said, "I may wind up as the quarterback of the Jets." Blue was a high school football quarterback star before he cast his lot with baseball—and Finley.

The A's have to ignore all the turmoil swirling over their heads if they are to bounce back. "I hope this whole mess is over now," Reggie Jackson said.

First, it was the Andrews' situation. He was fired and reinstated and he got two standing ovations from the Met fans when he grounded out in a pinch-hitting role in the eighth inning last night.

Then there's the Williams' situation. Manager Dick Williams is said to be quitting—win or lose—at the end of the series.

But the A's are trying to put this out of their minds for another few days.

"It's an even series and we got Vida and he's due for a good game," said second baseman Dick Green, "if we can just go out and play baseball."

The Mets, though, feel that things have swung their way. "What we've got going for us is past experience," said Bud Harrelson. "We didn't die when we fell behind before and we didn't do it this time, either."

What the Mets really had going for them in the fourth game was Staub. The Mets are taking a chance with him in the lineup because he can't throw but team physician Peter LaMotte smiled, "we took a chance and we won. We're going with his bat."

Staub, who injured his shoulder in the fourth game of the playoffs against Cincinnati, gave the Mets a 3-0 lead in the first inning with his opposite field homer off Ken Holtzman after Wayne Garrett and Felix Millan had singled.

Staub then gave the Mets a cushion with a two-run single in the three-run fourth inning. That was all that Jon Matlack, who went eight innings on the chilly night, needed to wrap it up. Ray Sadecki struggled through a bases-loaded crisis in the ninth for the save.

Staub's four hits made him the 35th player—and second of the series since Reggie Jackson did it in the second game—to accomplish this in a World Series.

One of them was Joe Garagiola, the noted quipster, who smiled, "now I know how Babe Ruth feels with his record being challenged."

Staub did his best to downplay the fact he's playing in pain. "I really don't want to go into that," he said, "because it really has nothing to do with the game. And a lot of guys play in pain."

But it had to be quite satisfying for Staub, who's been plagued with severe hand injuries in his two seasons with the Mets.

"A lot of people got down on me and said the injures weren't going to heal," he said. "But I think they're believing now."

The Oakland A's are.

Major AAU Events For The Bay Area

Catching up with the notebag:

There will be three major aquatic events put on by the Amateur Athletic Union in the Bay Area during the next year, it was reported by Beth Kaufman of Greenbrae, the mother of age group swimming and lifetime member of the National AAU.

Beth and three other Marinites were among the 900 delegates at last week's National AAU convention at Yellowstone National Park. The others were Don Buck of Novato, chairman of the National Junior Olympic Karate program; Lurana Hoetger of Strawberry and Mel Augustine, president of the Pacific Association AAU and Marin County juvenile probation supervisor.

Assigned to the Bay Area, with dates not set, were Junior Olympic swimming finals and a U.S.-Russia swimming meet in Concord, plus water polo nationals. Also planned for the Bay Area will be the National AAU 50-kilometer walking race.

THIRD ANNUAL College of Marin Alumni Golf Tournament already has a signup of 85 golfers and should be quite a fun time Oct. 26 at the Meadow Club. Dr. Harry Hensler and Don Collins are in charge of reservations for the tournament, open to College of Marin alums and their guests. Tourney proceeds go to the Paul (Dutch) Clymer Scholarship Fund.

KTIM WILL BE the only Bay Area radio station carrying University of California football games, in Berkeley and away. Station manager Bob Dinsmore said the Cal broadcasts will start with Saturday's home game against Oregon State, pregame show at 1:10 p.m.

JERRY PIRO, former Redwood basketballer has been named captain of University of Santa Clara's basketball team. Although a senior at Santa Clara, Jerry is playing as a junior in eligibility because he sat out his sophomore year with an injury. Piro spent his time this summer coaching Redwood High School's team (Shaw's Ice Cream) to the championship of the Drake Summer Basketball League, the team winning 12 of 13 games.

IT SEEMS ALL TELEVISION news and sports people from the San Francisco stations live in Marin County. And now the prettiest sports announcer in San Francisco is calling Marin home. It's Barbara Hunter, Channel 7's weekend sportscaster, who has moved herself and her 11-year-old daughter, Lisa, into a Mill Valley apartment.

BEFORE WE LEAVE THE wonderful world of television, I had better report that the A's seem to perform so well on TV I'm surprised they didn't sweep the Mets in four in the World Serious. During the regular season in which 20 of their games were televised by Channel 2, the A's TV won-lost record was 17-3.

WHILE LITTLE ALL-AMERICA candidate Jim Datrice gets most of the ink for St. Mary's College Galloping Gaels in football, George Adams, a senior halfback from Redwood and Tim Hanrahan, senior fullback from Marin Catholic, keep plugging along. Datrice leads the team in rushing, 476 yards and 5.5 average, and Adams is second, 182 yards and 3.2 average, and Hanrahan third, 40 yards and 2.5 average.

WORDS OF PRAISE for an ex-Tamalpais gridder filtered down from Walla Walla, Wash. and the Whitman College campus. After Whitman's 32-14 victory over Pacific University last Saturday, head coach Roy Thompson said, "Donn Warton had his best game." He is a 195-pound, 6-foot-1 senior defensive tackle who transferred to Whitman from San Francisco State.

49ers' Coach Nolan Will Name His Lineups Today

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Coach Dick Nolan today planned to announce his San Francisco 49er starting lineup for Sunday's invasion by New Orleans with the key question being who will go at quarterback.

Both John Brodie and Steve Spurrier, who went all the way last Sukday against Minnesota, have been sharing first-string duties at practice this week.

Asked whether rival factions on the team are developing behind the two signal-callers, Nolan said "if there is, I don't know of any. The way Steve came through last year after John was injured proved he was a capable leader. All the club is interested in is winning."

Brodie, now in his 17.h year with the team, is off to a slow start this season with 49 completions in 100 tosses for 579 yards.

YOU'RE OUT — Oakland A's catcher Ray Fosse last night prepared to tag out New York's Jerry Grote who was attempting to score in the seventh inning at Shea Stadium on pitcher Jon Matlack's single to left field. Fosse made the putout, but the Mets won the fourth game of the World Series, 6-1.

STARTS TODAY

Miller, Irwin In Kaiser

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — With the wearying Professional Golfers' Association's 1973 tour drawing to a close, many of the top stars have begun dropping out.

The $150,000 Kaiser International Open, the fifth from the end on the tour trail, is no exception. Of the top eight money winners this year, only two—Johnny Miller, the U.S. Open champion, and Hale Irwin — will be among the 156 pros teeing off today.

Miller, who has pocketed $126,709 this year, is seventh on the list and Irwin eighth.

Among those skipping the Kaiser were Jack Nicklaus, Bruce Crampton, Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino, Lanny Wadkins and Billy Casper. Wadkins, winner of the Byron Newson and USI classics, was a late scratch, pulling out Sunday.

With the absence of the top eight money winners, Miller has been installed as the pro-tournament favorite. His chief challengers are expected to be defending champion George Knudson and Irwin who finished in a tie for second last year.

The 72-hole tournament will be played over two courses during first two rounds. The North layout, longer at 6,683 yards, will be used for the final 36 holes. The South course is 113 yards shorter at 6,570 yards.

Host pro Craig Williamson said changes on the greens at the seventh and 14th holes of the North course will make for better play.

"The greens at 7 and 14 have been elevated, making pin positions more visible. The new greens are undulating instead of flat and should make putting more interesting," said Williamson.

Warriors Cannot Blame Barnett

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Don't blame Jim Barnett for failing to rally the Golden State Warriors to their second win of the season.

The peppery guard scored 18 of his game-high 28 points in the third period last night to bring the Warriors from a 52-39 halftime deficit to within 77-70 at the end of the third quarter.

But it wasn't enough as the Warriors fell 109-95 to the Bucks. Golden State has lost two of its three games so far this season and both have been to the Bucks.

Milwaukee used a balanced scoring attack and swarming defense to turn back the Warriors in the Bucks' 1973-74 home opener. Five players hit double figures for Milwaukee including Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with 22 and Bob Dandridge with 21.

The Bucks' defense forced Golden State into numerous turnovers in the final quarter and the Bucks pulled steadily away.

Rick Barry added 18 points for the Warriors and Nate Thurmond hit 14. The Warriors play in Kansas City Saturday night.

Flyers Show Seals That Magic Stays

OAKLAND (UPI)—The Philadelphia Flyers have lost none of the magic that carried them to a Stanley Cup playoff berth last season.

With goalie Bernie Parent turning away 28 shots, the Flyers romped to their fifth straight victory without a loss last night by thumping the California Golden Seals 5-1. That left the Flyers as the only unbeaten and untied team in the National Hockey League.

Joey Johnston spoiled Parent's bid for his third shutut by scoring on a power play with 53 seconds remaining in the second period. The Flyers had a 3-0 lead when Johnston took a pass from Walt McKechnie on Parent's right side and shoved home a sixfooter.

Five different players—Dave Schultz, Rick MacLeush, Ross Lonsberry, Simon Nolet and Bill Flett—tallied for Philadelphia.

It was the Seals' first loss in three games and broke a six-game winning streak, all at home, extending into last season.

A's Williams Gone After World Series

Skipper's Next Move To Yanks?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dick Williams will be gone as manager of the Oakland A's once the World Series is over, and what happens next should be interesting.

Williams would like to fill the managerial vacancy with the New York Yankees, but there's one little hitch involving his contract with Oakland.

It has two more years to run.

Normally, that's not much of a problem because owners and general managers are reluctant to hinder the movement of their managers if they should sense a better opportunity.

NOT EASY MAN

But that may be a problem for Williams, however, because the man he works for is Charlie Finley and if you haven't figured it out by this time in the World Series, Charlie Finley is not an easy man to work for. Ask Mike Andrews.

Anyway, Charlie Finley has fired plenty of managers—an average of almost one a year before Dick Williams arrived in 1971—and traded plenty of players, but there's one thing that comes through in all his maneuvering. Charlie Finley tells people when he's through with them—they don't tell him.

"He doesn't trade people he doesn't like," Vida Blue once said. "He'd rather keep them here and punish them."

ALLEGIANCE

There's never been any indication Finley and Williams don't get along and Williams always has shown allegiance to his boss. But three years under Finley is a long time and the other night Williams told his players that "no matter how this thing comes out, win or lose, I'm resigning after the World Series is over."

Williams said he would deny the story if it became public, and that's just what he did yesterday, over and over, but the players say he told them he's leaving.

"We weren't really shocked," said one. "Nothing that happens on this ball club ever really shocks us."

"He never mentioned the Yankees or any other ball club," said another. "He just said he's quitting after the Series no matter what. All of us figure he's had it. Most of us wonder how he managed to last this long working for Finley."

GUESSING GAME

The Yankees haven't yet approached Williams and there's a pretty good guessing game going of exactly what approach Finley is going to take.

The feisty Oakland owner is just unpredictable enough that he might willingly release Williams from his contract. Or he might take him to court to enforce it.

If Finley chooses to fight to keep Williams from the Yankees, precedent is on his side. A court ruled 10 years ago that an assistant coach with the Chicago Bears had to work out his contract in Chicago rather than become head coach of the Los Angeles Rams.

His name was George Allen and after George Halas won his victory in court, he condescendingly released Allen from his contract.

'STILL LOOKING'

As for the Yankees, they say simply, "we're still looking for a manager."

"We have made no commitments to anybody," said Gabe Paul, the team's chief executive. "We're looking for a man with experience."

Dick Williams has taken three American League teams to the World Series in his six years as a manager. You have to figure that's experience.

ON TAKING SERIES

Oakland Ready To Concentrate

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the early World Series games seemingly the least of their worries, the Oakland A's now are determined to get down to the business of retaining their World Championship.

The A's, whose camp has been split because of the off-field maneuvering by owner Charlie Finley, dropped a 6-1 decision to the New York Mets last night to tie the series at 2-2.

In public, the players' morale has appeared high, but the headline making controversy surrounding Manager Dick Williams and second baseman Mike Andrews has left its mark.

Despite his denials, Williams is pencilled in as the new manager of the New York Yankees. Andrews suited up for the fourth game, his first since his unhappy appearance Sunday at Oakland when his two errors allowed the Mets to win and leave the coast with a split of the first two games.

But with Andrews back in uniform and Williams steadfastly denying that he will quit the team after the Series, the A's appeared confident that they would get back to just playing baseball when Vida Blue opposes Jerry Koosman in the fifth game at Shea Stadium tonight at 5:30 p.m.

"It's an even up series now," said Dick Green, the A's second baseman. "We've got Vida going Thursday and he's due for a good game. If we can just go out and play baseball, we'll be alright."

Reggie Jackson, the A's' slugger who has been held in check by the challenging Met pitching, expressed hope that the internal strife now is at an end.

"I hope this mess is over now," said Jackson. "It's kind of been a boring World Series. You can't even walk in the lobby of the hotel without people coming up to you and wanting to know what's the story with Mike Andrews."

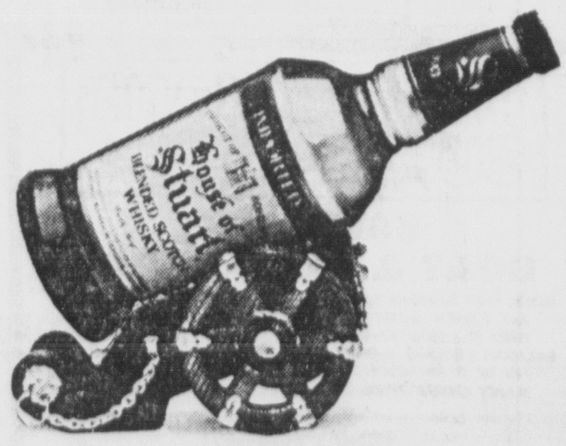

But the return of Andrews to the team may lift the A's' spirits.

Andrews, who suffered through three trying days after Finley tried to force him into premature retirement by insisting he wasn't physically fit to play, pinch hit in the eighth inning and grounded out. But he received two standing ovations from the New York crowd,

Bucs' Cash To Phils For Brett

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Phillies completed the first major baseball trade of the off-season today as left-hander Ken Brett went to Pittsburgh for second baseman Dave Cash.

Brett, 25, compiled a 13-9 record with a 3.44 earned run average this past season with the Phillies after coming over from the Milwaukee Brewers in a big seven-man trade last winter.

Cauh, a hard-hitting second baseman with a lifetime .290 batting average slipped to .270 last season. But his 21 doubles and two homers give the Phillies some valuable righthanded power from a position that has not delivered that way for many years for them.

The acquistion of the 25-year old Cash also give the Phillies the opportunity to deal off their incumbant second baseman, Denny Doyle, who enjoyed his best season ever in '73, batting .273.

At least a half-dozen clubs—especially the New York Yankees—have been pursuing Doyle—who has a reputation as a good field, no-hit infielder.

Brett, who was sidelined part of last season after being injured in a sliding accident, is one of baseball's best hitting pitchers. However, the heavy-hitting Pirates did not get him for that reason.

It is expected that Brett will step right in as a regular in the Pittsburgh starting rotation that was a sore spot most of last year. He was one of the key players last winter when the Phillies, in an effort to rebuild their own pitching staff, sent third baseman Don Money to Milwaukee for four players.

NBA Kings Feed Nate For Win

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

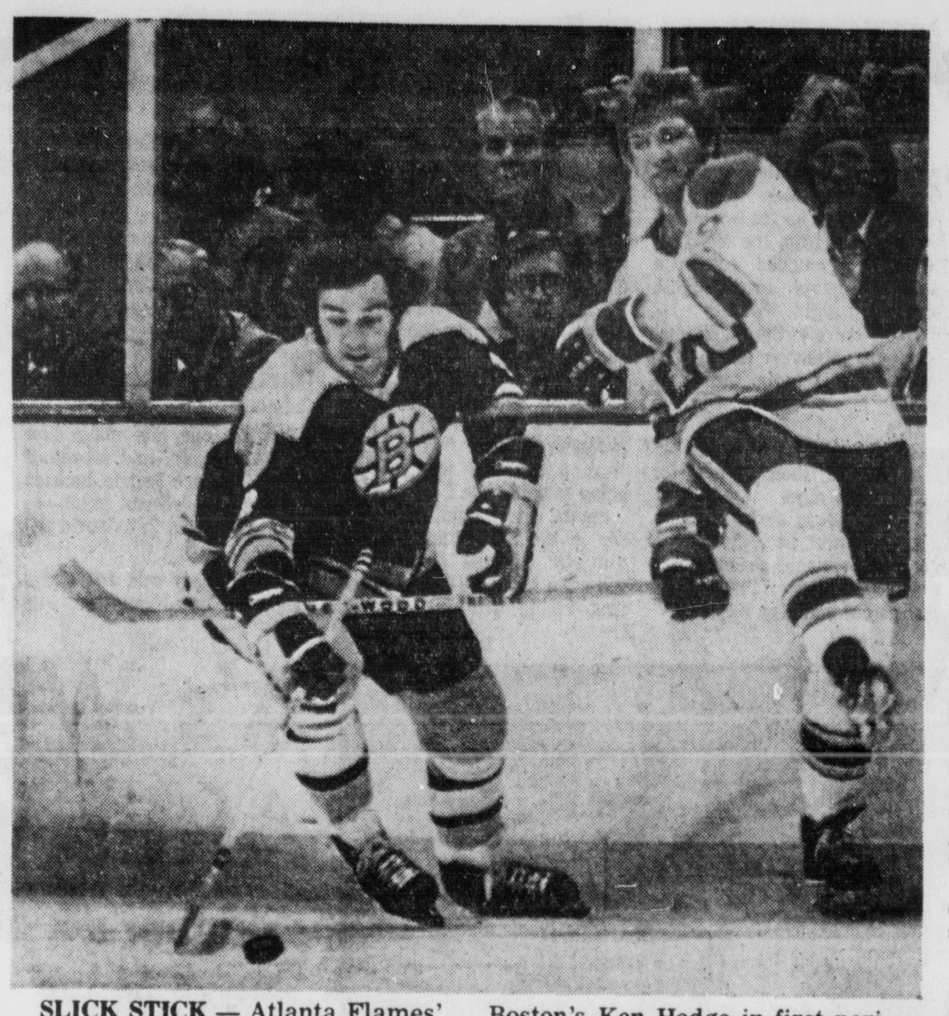

When in doubt, give it to Nate Archibald.

That was the Kansas City-Omaha Kings' philosophy again last night and again it paid off in victory.

Archibald, one of the smallest players in the National Basketball Association at 6-foot-0, hit eight of the Kings' last 12 points, including a pair of free throws with two seconds left, to lift K.C.-Omaha to a 108-106 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Seattle tied the score at 98-98 late in the game and Archibald went to work. He dropped in four free throws in the final minute to give the surprising Kings their third victory in four games. The win left them tied with Milwaukee, which beat Golden State 109-95 in the only other NBA game, for the lead in the Midwest Division.

Archibald, the NBA's leading scorer last season, led the Kings with 27 points while Spencer Haywood was high man for Seattle with 31.

SLICK STICK — Atlanta Flames' Keith McCreary (right) executed a fancy step — and some underhanded stick work — while falling off balance attempting to stop Boston's Ken Hodge in first period National Hockey League action in Atlanta last night. Atlanta won, 4-3.

Atlanta Waiving QB Shiner

Combined AP & UPI

ATLANTA — Veteran Dick Shiner, starting quarterback for the Atlanta Falcons for the first four games of the season, has been placed on waivers.

Shiner, in his 10th season in the National Football League, had directed the Falcons to a 62-7 victory in their opening game against New Orleans but the club then suffered three straight defeats without scoring a touchdown.

The former Maryland star was reported to have suffered a shoulder injury against San Francisco two weeks ago and was replaced by Bob Lee who started last week in Atlanta's victory over the Chicago Bears. Shiner was moved to the taxi squad.

Boxing

HONOLULU — Ben Villaflor used a lightning left hook to knock out Kuniaki Shibata in the first round last night to win back the World Boxing Association junior lightweight crown he lost to Shibata seven months ago.

The blow came at 1:56 of the first round of a scheduled 15-rounder after the two fighters exchanged flurries of blows and moved in close.

Basketball

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association yesterday asked Zelmo Beaty to return to the club and end his holdout.

The 10-year All-Pro center had been boycotting the club, asking for a new two-year, $500,000 contract.

Horse Racing

NEW YORK — Trainer Lucien Laurin said yesterday that Secretariat, winner of horse racing's Triple Crown, will make his final start in the Canadian International Championships at Woodbine Sunday, Oct. 28. The Toronto, Ont., event is a 1⅜ mile test on grass.

Tennis

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Mona Shallau of Iowa City, Iowa yesterday set third-seeded Rosemary Casals of Sausalito 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a $110,000 women's pro tennis tourney, while second-seeded Australian Margaret Court withdrew from the field with a stomach ailment.

NHL ROUNDUP

Toronto's Plea Is Heard

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

When the Toronto Maple Leafs issued a desperate plea for help following their worst campaign in 15 years, the cry was heard from one coast to another of North America and as far away as Sweden.

From Boston, Philadelphia and Vancouver, the Leafs obtained major league goaltenders; from Medicine Hat, Alberta, they took Lanny McDonald as their No. 1 draft choice; and from weden they acquired a couple of outstanding prospects, defenseman Borge Salming and fleet forward Inge Hammarstrom.

In addition, Toronto chose a man from its own backyard, hometown favorite Red Kelly, as its new coach.

The Leafs, who finished sixth in the East Division of the National Hockey League last season and haven't gone higher than fourth since 1967, won their third game in four outings Wednesday night by upsetting the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, 6-4. McDonald got the winning goal, his first in the NHL, on a 40-foot drive with only 2:17 left in the game, and Salming drew an assist, his second of the evening.

It was the first loss after two victories for the Canadiens, who went 13 games before losing last season and dropped only 10 games all season.

"I'm very pleased with the play of those two boys from Sweden, Hammarstrom and Salming," Kelly said after the game. "These two players have fitted in very well with our lineup considering the amount of time they played in the NHL, and they can't do anything but get better.

In addition to Montreal, the Boston Bruins and California Golden Seals also were knocked from the unbeaten ranks. Boston dropped a 4-3 decision to the Atlanta Flames despite a pair of goals by Phil Esposito, his sixth and seventh, and California fell 5-1 to the Philadelphia Flyers, who have won four in a row.

The New York Rangers also remained unbeaten, although they have one tie, by whipping St. Louis 4-0 and in other games, Chicago beat Vancouver 5-0 and Pittsburgh beat winless Minnesota 4-2.

Leon Rochefort scored two goals as Atlanta, a second-year team, beat Boston for the first time, but it was rookie Chuck Arnason who collected the winning goal midway through the final period.

Rob Gilbert scored the 271st goal of his career, leaving him one short of the all-time club record, and Eddie Giacomin turned in his 44th career shutout to help the Rangers move into first place in the Eaut.

Tony Esposito registered his second shutout in four games for Chicago, with Cliff Koroll and Dennis Hull each getting a pair of goals, and Greg Polis had one goal and two assists in leading Pittsburgh over Minnesota.

nonetheless.

"It made me feel great to hear those people cheer like that," said Andrews. "It gave me a lift."

Despite the defeat. the A's seemed happy about the outside pressure being lifted and were confident they'll win.

"It now amounts to a three-game series and I've got Vida on Thursday and Catfish (Hunter) on Saturday," said Williams. "If there's a seventh game, Ken Holtzman (pulled Wednesday in the first inning after getting just one man out) will be my pitcher."

"Now this thing is all square and we'll be going back to Oakland," said A's captain Sal Bando. "I'd like to see the people out there react like they do here. It was tremendous what they did for Mike."

PREP NOTES

San Marin, San Rafael Are Getting Some Kicks

By LEW CODDINGTON

Odds and ends on the Marin prep scene:

FOOTBALL — San Marin coach Bob Martin and San Rafael coach Bob Muster think they have excellent punters, and when the teams went six series without a first down at the start of their clash Saturday, the booters got a chance to show what they could do.

San Marin's George Saunders boomed punts of 44, 47 and 53 yards, and San Rafael's Greg Abbett blasted the ball 57, 30 and 51.

TURNCOAT — Assistant coach Jess Payan, architect of the defense which gave Redwood its long-awaited 6-3 victory over Terra Linda, savors the triumph. The last time Redwood beat the Trojans, in 1968, Jess was on the other side of the field as an assistant coach.

ON THE RUN — Marin cross country teams acquitted themselves well in the San Ramon Invitational Saturday.

Redwood won the girls race, and in boys competition was third in the freshman, fourth in the sophomore and fourth in the varsity. San Rafael was second in the soph, fourth in the frosh and sixth in the varsity. Tamalpais was second in the girls.

Tam's Kate Keyes broke the record for the mile and a half course, running 8:12, but finished second, one behind the winner. Her sister, Maggie, was third, Diane Killeen of Redwood fourth and Tam's Kathy Broderick fifth.

Tam's Aran Collier broke the frosh record, doing 9:12 for a mile and three quarters, but also was second. Best local varsity showing was sixth by Redwood's Kevin Glasner.

STICK 'EM — Drake's football victory over Novato was the first since 1967, though four of the five intervening losses were close. The Pirates haven't won their first two league games since 1964.

HOOP NOTES — Marin Catholic swept past four opponents to win the Class C basketball tournament over the weekend at Terra Linda High, while Terra Linda swept the "B" tournament, held at Drake.

HAIL HALEY — Ann Haley of Marin Catholic inscribed her name into the MCAL record book last Thursday by winning the 50-yard freestyle in 26.2 seconds against Redwood, clipping six tenths off the mark set last year by Redwood's Ann Redig.

WHERE ARE THEY? — Four of the six water polo officials scheduled to work last Friday's games canceled out for one reason or another, reports Drake coach Dave Ramos, forcing postponement of the San Marin-Drake game. The other two games went on with only one official each. The San Marin-Drake game will be played Wednesday at Novato.

Novato Grid Team Tries Comeback Vs. Host Tam

The gauntlet has been thrown down to the Novato Hornets.

The pre-season favorites for the Marin County Athletic League football championship, who were stunned by upstart Drake High last week, began the long march back tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. when they visit Tamalpais.

Novato (0-1 in the MCAL) must win its next five if it hopes to capture the title, and that would be a sharp reversal, for the Hornets have lost their last three after opening with two victories.

"We all have to realize that you can't change anything that's happened. We'll just have to do a job the rest of the season," said Novato coach Al Scott, adding "Terra Linda won five straight last year, so why can't we?"

There are two reasons, but both are correctable. The Hornets fumbled eight times (losing five) and gave up 127 yards and two touchdowns through the air in the 20-14 loss to Drake.

To correct the latter, Scott has installed Mike Heilman at safety and moved Dave Brazell to right corner. Another defensive change may find Mike Asciutto, recovered from a preseason bruised thigh, starting at left tackle.

On offense, halfback Ken Ferrari remains out with muscle problems in the lower back, and Les Nicolini will start. Rob Douglass gets the nod at left guard. Battles were being waged in practice between Mike Moroski and Chris de Recat at quarterback and Mark Magers and Mark Reagan at halfback.

Tamalpais, 0-1 in the MCAL and 2-3 overall after losing to St. Mary's of Berkeley last week, 22-6, also has a fumble problem to lick.

"We have the potential to beat them (Novato)," says coach Jess Racines, "but we have to stop making mistakes." A long St. Mary's T.D. pass and two blocked quick kicks hurt last week.

Probable starting lineups:

Tamalpais: (Offense) LE John Hanley, LT Rob Michaelson, RG Ray Bell, C Tom Hunt, RG Ray Snell, RT Dan Morgan, RE Mike Lamb, QB Mark Moore, WB Ken Praszker, HB Kevin Murphy, FB Fred Adams. (Defense) LE Alvin Hall, LT Rob Michaelson, MG Snell, RT Tom Silewicz, RE Hunt, LLB Bob Praszker, MLB Curt Campbell, RLB K. Praszker, LCB Clevert Triggs, RCB Hanley, S Michael Evans.

Novato: (Offense) LE John Nissen, LT Ken Straw, LG Rob Douglass, C Len Miller, RG Dave Newirth, T Greg Zoeller, RE Tom Fisher, QB Chris de Recat or Mike Moroski, FB Mark Lipe, HB Les Nicolini, HB Mark Magers or Mark Reagan. (Defense) LE Scott Johnson, LT Bill Simondi or Mike Asciutto, RT Bob Clay, RE Hal Jennings, LLB Mike Martin, MLB Straw, RLB Mark Doran, LHB Steve Hoog, RHB Dave Brazell, S Mike Heilman.

TREVINO TALKS GOLF

Miss 'Em Quick

By LEE TREVINO

I'm not trying to make a case for hit-and-run driving (or even putting), but slow play is making golf a tiresome game for a lot of people.

Gene Sarazen's advice always was to "miss 'em quick," and "the Squire" holds track records from Pebble Beach to St. Andrews.

Too many youngsters just starting are wasting their energy and their companions' patience by dawdling over shots. They change clubs a couple of times, throw grass in the air, line up putts with a plumb bob and compass — and still hit worse shots than if they hadn't taken all those motions.

Tempo is important to golf, and it can be wrecked by standing too long over a ball. Billy Casper says your muscles pinch up when you stand over a putt more than five or six seconds. Heck, Jack Nicklaus used to be so slow that his clubs tarnished between shots, but Jack's stepped up his pace a lot.

It's a good learning habit to think about your next shot while you're walking to your ball. Choose your club without rushing, but don't play eenie-meenie-minie-mo with it. Take your stance, look at your target twice (that's plenty), then bust it.

Rancho Gridders Host Tough Piner

Rancho Cotate High School faces a crucial Sonoma County League football showdown Saturday at 1 p.m. when the Piner High School Prospectors of Santa Rosa seek victory gold at the Rohnert Park School.

The winner will hold undisputed first place in the tight SCL race, as both schools come in with 2-0 league marks.

In other high school grid action, Petaluma hosts Montgomery of Santa Rosa tomorrow night at 8 o'clock and Saturday at 2 p.m. Tomales treks to Upper Lake, St. Vincent of Petaluma visits Point Arena at 2:30 p.m. and Casa Grande of Petaluma travels to Menlo Park at 2 p.m.

Against Piner, the Cougars will be facing an explosive offense that has accounted for 100 points in two league games with routs of 54-24 over Healdsburg and 46-0 against Analy of Sebastopol.

The Prospectors high powered offense is geared by quarterback Gary Garyalde and running backs Doug Bartholomew and Ed Smith. It will be severely tested by the stingy Rancho defense.

Unbeaten Petaluma is in a three-way tie for first place in the North Bay League race with Vallejo and Napa at 2-0, with the dangerous Vikings (1-1) from Santa Rosa just a game back. Napa and Vallejo face each other tomorrow night.

North Central League II teams Tomales and St. Vincent will continue their battle for the league title on the road Saturday, as Tomales (1-0) takes on the hapless Upper Lake Cougars (0-1) while St. Vincent (0-1) seeks its first NCL II win against Point Arena (1-0).

Petaluma Harriers Triumph

Petaluma High School gave the North Bay League a preview of things to come yesterday, as the Trojans ran away from the field to take first place in the NBL Cross-Country Center Meet at Dan Foley Park in Vallejo.

Petaluma finished with 49 points and runnerup Montgomery of Santa Rosa scored 66.

In other Southern Sonoma cross country action yesterday, Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park upped its Sonoma County League mark to 3-1 with a 25-30 victory over host Piner of Santa Rosa.

Petaluma's finish was a familiar one as senior Jon Sisler took first in 15:29, followed by Junior Dan Aldridge in 15:42. Greg Sabourin took eighth for the Trojans with a 16:31 clocking.

Stan Plyler and Ken Wong finished one-two for Rancho Cotate, with Plyler navigating the 2.7 mile course in 13:59 and Wong turning in a 14:26.

Relaxed Ali Begins His Lubbers Fight Countdown

JAKARTA (UPI)—A relaxed Muhammad Ali began the final countdown today for his non-title fight with Dutch champion Rudi Lubbers—a fight in which the former world champion has everything to lose and nothing to gain.

Ali squares off against Lubbers in a 12-round bout in Jakarta's 100,000-seat stadium on Saturday.

"It's just three days. I'm breaking my whole future down into just three days," Ali said. "I've got three days to suffer and live right to whip this man which means the (Joe) Frazier fight is home," Ali said.

Ali has already signed to fight a rematch against Frazier on Jan. 28 in New York.

"Not whipping this man, I can't hardly go into the Frazier fight expecting the people to come. The stocks goes down too far. I can't go into the Frazier fight with a loss to a nobody," Ali said, explaining why he has to beat Lubbers.

Lubbers, 28, has lost only one fight since turning pro 3 ½ years ago. He lost a decision to European champion Joe Bugner last January. Since then, Lubbers has been in training for his fight with Ali.

Ali, on the other hand, is training only 10 days for Saturday's bout — a routine Lubbers predicted will lead to Ali's downfall.

Ali said his condition is good enough to take on Lubbers. "I'm not up like I should be but I'm in good enough shape for him," Ali said.

Ali said in case he should lose to Lubbers, he would have no other choice but to ask for a rematch.

"It loss) would hurt too much. The best thing I could do if he whipped me would be get a rematch and whip him again. I would have to clear up my record," he said. "This is a fight I really didn't want. We made a deal with these people. You can't lie to these Muslim people. You don't promise them and then quit (but) I wish we could have canceled out.

"Lubbers is hungry for money and for that fame and the future of what he can get," Ali said.

Jakarta was chosen as the site because Indonesia was previously governed by the Dutch and because about 90 per cent of the people are Muslim— - factors appealing to both camps.

Despite the popularity of the contest, however, ticket sales have been less than expected. Promoters are asking $65-70 for a ringside seat-a fantastic price in Indonesia. Even the seats at the top of the huge stadium are selling for $2.50, which is still a considerable sum to a Jakarta worker.

In the meantime, both fighters began to polish up their attack for Saturday's fight. Lubbers finished his ring workouts Tuesday, leaving the last four days to concentrate on running and calisthenics. Ali, however, will continue to hold evening sparring sessions in addition to his conditioning program.

ABA PLAY

Bad Night All Around For Finley

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It was a bad night all around for Charlie Finley.

The owner of the Oakland A's watched his baseball team drop a 6-1 decision to the New York Mets in the fourth game of the World Series last night. At the same time the A's were going down to defeat, Finley's Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association were losing to Carolina 108-95.

The Tams held a 74-66 lead after three quarters but Carolina, behind the ball-hawking of Ted McClain, who pulled off four steals and scored 15 points in the final 12 minutes of play, rallied to outscore Memphis 42-21 in the final period.

Tom Owens paced the Cougars with 27 points while Billy Cunningham added 21 and McClain finished with 18. Johnny Neumann led the Tams with 24.

Kentucky posted its third win in as many games with a 116-106 victory over Virginia and Denver took over first place in the West Division by downing Utah 112-97 in the only other ABA games.

Dan Issel sparked the victorious Colonels with 33 points and Louie Dampier chipped in with 27 while George Gervin topped Virginia with 29. The setback ran the winless Squires' losing streak to five.

Dave Robisch's 24 points led Denver past Utah as the Rockets raised their record to 3-1 and moved a half game ahead of both the Stars and Indiana. Six other Denver players scored in double figures with Ralph Simpson adding 18 to the Rockets' attack. Ron Boone led Utah with 20.

Staub's Bat Heroics Good Medicine For Ailing Dad

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Everybody was gone by now and the clubhouse was empty save for one figure.

He sat silently, not in front of his own locker but by another one in the back end of the clubhouse because that was the general area he had been in after all the other players and media people had gone.

The sharp glare of light in the clubhouse accentuated Rusty Staub's curly red hair as he sat there, with the blouse of his uniform open, thinking about all the questions he had been asked about his "perfect night."

Oh, sure, that's what the official boxscore for the fourth game of the 1973 World Series will always show.

It will show Rusty Staub knocked in five runs for the New York Mets and led them to a 6-1 conquest over the Oakland A's with a home run, three singles and a walk in five trips. That's a perfect night, isn't it?

Not quite.

One very important element was missing for him last night at Shea Stadium, and without that, it could never be a perfect night.

To understand, you have to know how close he is to his entire family and the tremendously warm feeling he has for his father.

Ray Staub, 58, lives for his boy, Rusty, and vice versa.

The elder Staub would've loved being at Shea Stadium last night to have seen his 29-year-old son wallop that opposite field homer and those three singles, but that was impossible because he was in St. Charles General Hospital in New Orleans with a heart condition.

"My Dad has had angina pectoris, pains in the chest I guess you'd call it, for a lot of years."

"When I was in high school, the doctor stopped him from going to the games I played in on account of his heart condition. He entered the hospital this last time the day after the playoffs," said Staub, who injured his right shoulder in the fourth playoff game with the Reds when he ran into the rightfield wall.

"I know he was watching on television tonight," Staub smiled for the first time. "Mom was worrying when he went into the hospital whether he should watch the series on television but the doctors said the anxiety of his not knowing what we were doing might be worse for him than watching the games, so they're letting him watch.

"Before he went into the hospital, I talked to him on the phone. He asked me how I was feeling? I told him 'I'm hurting a little bit, Pop, but I'm hoping I can get it together enough so I can play.'"

Rusty Staub got it together fine last night here. Ask the A's.

Staub not only has his banged-up shoulder to contend with but also both his hands, one which he was operated on last year and the other on which he was hit with another pitch earlier this season. He never really has been right since.

One thing Staub always has had is a good baseball head. He realized his run into the wall had impaired his throwing so he got together with Don Hahn, the Mets' agile centerfielder, and between them they worked out a system before the series began.

Basically, the system is simple.

"If any balls are hit in the alleys or in the rightfield corner, I'm coming in as fast as I can get over there," explains Hahn. "I get on my horse. If I get over there the same time as Rusty, he lets me have it. If he gets there first and a long throw is necessary, he flips the ball to me. We worked it out in Oakland before the series began."

For a guy playing with two bad hands and a damaged shoulder, Rusty Staub isn't doing half badly with his 7-for-15 so far in the series and his .467 batting average.

Ray Staub should be proud of his boy.

Whadd'ya mean should be?

You ought to hear that happy roar that bounced off the walls in St. Charles General when Rusty Staub hit his three-run homer.

You could tell right away Ray Staub was feeling much better.

Mark Howe Scores Two In WHA Tilt

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Mark Howe has taken the first two steps in pursuit of his grand old man.

Mark, an 18-year-old wing and the son of Gordie Howe, scored his first two goals as a professional last night and also had an assist in pacing the Houston Aeros to a 7-2 victory over the Vancouver Blazers. Gordie, who is playing on the same line as Mark, is the all-time scoring leader of the National Hockey League with 786 regular season goals and another 67 in the playoffs.

Frank Hughes also scored a pair of goals for Houston, which moved into a tie with idle Edmonton for first place in the Western Division of the World Hockey Association.

Danny Lawson, the leading goal scorer of the WHA last season, scored both of Vancouver's goals.

In the only other game last night, matching the two teams that met for the first WHA championship last season, the Winnipeg Jets beat the New England Whalers, 3-1. Tom Webster scored New England's only goal with the game 22 seconds old, and Winnipeg retaliated with three goals in the final session on shots by Danny Johnson, Chris Bordeleau and Norm Beaudin.

It was the first victory for the Jets in six outings at Boston.

WITH STEELERS

'72 Rookie Marvel Harris A '73 Flop

By DENNIS MORABITO

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — They've locked Sir Lancelot in the stadium dungeon and everyone's blaming King Arthur.

Franco Harris, the focal point of the Pittsburgh Steelers' fairy tale season last year, has been a flop so far in 1973.

He didn't even make an appearance last Sunday when the Steelers suffered their first loss, a 19-7 defeat by the Cincinnati Bengals in which Pittsburgh gained only 71 yards on the ground.

The serfs were in a hanging mood when Chuck Noll, who put together the round table here, held court earlier this week. When the offense looked so bad anyway, they asked, why not play Harris?

Noll assured them that "no one wants him in the game more than I do."

Sophomore jinx and the potentially corroding effect of AFC-Rookie-of-the-Year honors aside, Harris has not run well this year because of a painful left knee.

The injury was suffered in a pre-season game against Green Bay. Harris was sidelined, then played, then sidelined on alternate weeks of the preseason and early regular season. Three games ago, against the Houston Oilers, Harris was running with fire, allowing Noll to proclaim him "ready."

With a lackluster performance against the San Diego Chargers, and the benching last week, speculation arose that Harris had a really serious knee problem which required surgery several weeks ago.

When a reporter pressed the surgery question at a press luncheon, Noll said "I really don't know. You'll have to ask the doctor about that. That's really up to the doctor. Franco is not 100 per cent."

The word from Sir Lancelot is: "All I know is what he (Noll) says in the papers. Nothing's wrong. My knee feels fine now and I'm sure I'll be ready to go.

"I didn't run well against the Chargers because I wanted to take care of the knee," the softspoken running back said. "But it felt fine today if I can just keep it that way."

Harris said a stretched ligament, combined with the unyielding synthetic turf covering most modern stadiums, has made the pain difficult to live with.

How does he like being the object of such deep concern and morbid speculation?

"It doesn't bother me, because I know how it feels."

In the fifth game last year, Harris picked up his first 100-yard plus game against Buffalo, then put together five consecutive games of 100 yards or more rushing on his way to becoming only the fifth rookie back in NFL history to gain over 1,000 yards in a season.

After five games this year, Harris has carried only 19 times for negligible yardage. And while Noll talks of his big back's lack of timing and condition, he's obviously pleased with the performances of Steve Davis, Frenchy Fuqua, and lastly, Preston Pearson.

Raiders Wary Of Broncos

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Raiders are five-point favorites to take Monday night's National Football League tussle at Denver, but that doesn't lull cornerback Willie Brown into thinking he'll have an easy time.

The perennial all-star notes that Denver is tops in the league in both passing and total offense, as well as seventh in rushing.

Brown says "we know we have the personnel to do the job" against the passing of Denver quarterback Charley Johnson, who bombed Houston with four touchdown passes last Sunday.

The Raider defensive group used to call itself the "soul patrol." Three-fourths of the group remain with awesome Jack Tatum of Ohio State having replaced Dave Grayson. Brown thinks the group is even tougher than it was a few seasons ago when Grayson was in his prime.

"Have you seen Tatum hit? I say we don't have four defensive backs in there, we've got three and we've got four linebackers instead."

Brown won't choose between the zone and man-to-man defense.

Stanford In Shape For Washington

STANFORD (UPI) —Stanford should be in good shape Saturday when it calls on Washington.

Brad Williams and Dan Francis, both second stringers, were the only players to miss Wednesday's drills but both were expected to be ready.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Life Company's Potential Good

By ROGER E. SPEAR

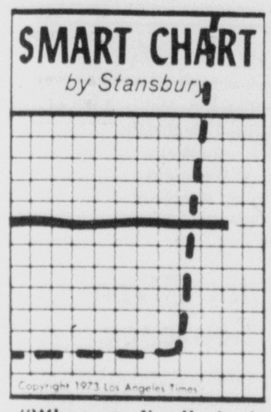

Q. Several years ago I bought shares of Monumental Life Insurance which subsequently became Monumental Corp. (OTC). The share price fluctuates considerably. If I sold these shares I would have a large capital gain. Why has the stock declined so much recently? — E.L.

A. Earnings for the first half were held to a 10 per cent year-to-year gain. Not only was this below the 20 per cent profit increase reported for the full 1972 year but the gain was less than that of the industry in general. However, a broader gain for the balance of the year could lift net to $1.25-$1.30 a share for 1973. The company's real estate operation, Monumental Properties, has grown rapidly and last year accounted for 14 per cent of income. The drop in share price reflected the disappointing earnings for the first half as well as market conditions. Also affecting the share's performance has been the market's antipathy to real estate-related issues while interest rates were climbing. Retention of these shares for continues appreciation appears warranted.

Q. I hold 1,030 shares of Windsor Fund and was withdrawing $100 monthly. In 1972 I changed to taking only income and capital gains distributions. The share value decline has been a source of concern. Since I am a retiree in my late 70's, my goal is income and safety. Your advice would be gratefully accepted. — K.J.

A. This conservative fund aims at safe, steady growth with a moderate income return. In fact, at current net asset value the yield from income distributions is close to 4 per cent, which is significantly better than most growth common stock funds. In the five years through 1972, Windsor was well above average as to performance. The record in the 1969-70 bear market was unusually good, although in the 1973 down phase the fund's performance did not match that of the averages.

A conservative investment policy places emphasis on high-quality growth issues which are temporarily undervalued. Portfolio turnover rate and expense ratio are moderate. Hold.

"When we finally had the hamburger market cornered, the competition found that cute little giggly kid for TV commercials."

Talk On Interest Rate Future Helps The Market

NEW YORK (UPI) —Stocks moved a bit higher in fairly active trading today on the New York Stock Exchange with the help of some encouraging news on the future course of the nation's interest rates.

Analysts said a third consecutive decline in 52-week treasury bill yields during the latest auction might have encouraged some buying.

In addition, Chase Manhattan Bank President Willard C. Butcher said the nation's prime lending rate — now at a record 60 per cent at most banks — should begin to decline in the coming weeks.

An undercurrent of profit taking, however, kept the market's gains modest.

Observers felt much of the list remained vulnerable to selling after last month's 600-point runup in the Dow.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange were irregularly higher in moderate trading.

By WAT TAKESHITA

Three New Companies Moving Into Hamilton Industrial Park

A mail order firm and a couple of manufacturers will be moving into Hamilton Industrial Park to open new businesses.

William Hoey Company arranged leases for Dave Semling of Terra Linda, who will mail order general merchandise; Sunshine Shake Co., manufacturing roofing shakes; and Quiet Earth Terrarium Co., which makes terrariums.

DAVE SEMLING's mail order business will open about Nov. 1 at 57-N Hamilton Drive. Semling operated a mail order business in St. Paul, Minn., for eight years before coming to Terra Linda three years ago. He was president of Combined Retail Services in San Rafael until June, when he resigned to go into business for himself.

SUNSHINE SHAKE Co., which will produce roofing shakes, will open in a month or two at 25-H Hamilton Drive, across the highway from Alvarado Inn. Proprietor is Floyd Heckman of Mill Valley, who has been a roofer with Booth and Little in Greenbrae. A native of Marin, Heckman has been in the roofing business for more than 10 years. Both he and his wife, Marsha, attended Tamalpais High School.

QUIET EARTH TERRARIUM Co., at 25-G Hamilton Drive, is owned by W. Patrick Maloney of Santa Venetia. A resident of Marin for 18 years, Maloney will make glass terrariums for wholesale to florists, nurseries and some gift shops.

The Hoey Company also arranged leases for Richard Fountain of Novato, Chronicle distributor, who will use space at 19-I Hamilton Drive for sorting and wrapping newspapers; and Dependable Aluminum Windows Co., which is moving from 23 Lisbon Street to 50 Lisbon Street, San Rafael.

SIBYLLE B. MAYER of San Rafael has been promoted to business service officer in Crocker Bank's business services department in San Francisco.

Mrs. Mayer is an 11-year veteran with Crocker Bank. Before the promotion, she was an installation representative for the business services department.

Hardison

KEN HARDISON of Mill Valley has joined California Land Title Co. of Marin at 810 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, as escrow officer.

Hardison has 13 years of experience with title companies, 10 years in Los Angeles and the last three years in the Bay Area. His other interests include behaviorism, bridge, and physical culture.

IMPORTS INTERNATIONAL at Strawberry Town & Country Village has been transformed into a contemporary boutique under the new manager, Kay Taylor of Sausalito.

Miss Taylor, originally from Upchurch, England, formerly managed the Afro-Asian Gifts store in Sausalito.

Under her management, Imports International has added a new dress department featuring exotic apparel from India, Greece and Latin America such as woolen raunas, alpaca ponchos, and silk Indian wedding shirts. A complete children's line has been added. Other items from around the world include beauty secrets, love oils, handcrafted jewelry, a wide selection of bedspreads, art objects, baskets, fur throw rugs, and Persian print jute rugs.

COTTAGE SHY-LOCK will be the new name of Cottage Stylist beauty salon at 1011 A Street in San Rafael, across the street from the old Courthouse Square.

The beauty shop will be sold next week to August C. Chemotti of San Anselmo, who will retain the same employees. Chemotti has been in the hair styling business for eight years, in Southern California, Hawaii and Marin. He was with Michaels of Marin for the past two years, and with Hair Care Center in Mill Valley before that.

Chemotti said his Cottage Shy-Lock will provide haircutting and styling for men as well as women, and facials in addition to manicures. His shop will feature the natural look.

Gerald M. Pike, who operated Cottage Stylist for the past three years, will continue as hair stylist for the new owner.

JEAN CULMER of Mill Valley has been named manager of Daisybug Boutique in Strawberry's Town & Country Village. Wallace Bradshaw, president of the Little Daisy's stores, announced the appointment.

Mrs. Culmer said the "layered look" and the slinky look are the latest fashions emphasized at the Daisybug, where lines such as Jones of New York, John Meyer, Loubelle, and Norman Todd are offered.

Mrs. Culmer transferred from the Tops 'n Things store in San Francisco and at one time managed Katinkas in Mill Valley. She was formerly president of the PTA at Pleasant Valley School in Novato. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Gilfillan of Mill Valley.

EDDIE SNOW of Corte Madera was installed president of the Executives Association of San Francisco, succeeding Tom Moulin of San Rafael. The Executives Association is a non-profit organization founded in 1916 for the purpose of mutual support of member businesses.

Snow is vice president and area manager of Dale Carnegie Courses in the San Francisco area. Moulin, immediate past president of the Executives Association, owns Gabriel Moulin Studios.

ANGELINA ANDRADE of Novato won the grand prize of a one-week trip for two to Acapulco in the grand opening sweepstakes conducted by Northern California Savings and Loan Association at the new Novato office, 1711 Grant Avenue. Richard Smith is manager and vice president at the Novato office, which opened Oct. 3.

FRANK HOWARD ALLEN & Co. Realtors announced three more additions to its residential sales staff.

R. Peter Attell of Novato, a lifetime resident of Marin, joined the Novato office. Attell has been in Marin real estate for seven years, the past year with Frank Howard Allen's Greenbrae office.

Katherine Erickson of San Rafael, past president of the Marin Civic Ballet Association, joined the San Rafael office; and Celia Barrett of Sausalito joined the Mill Valley sales staff of Frank Howard Allen. Mrs. Barrett has been secretary in the Mill Valley office for the past year.

OLIVIA CERVANTES of San Rafael was elected an assistant vice president of Gibraltar Savings, Executive Vice President John J. Goodwin Jr. announced. Miss Cervantes is supervisor of the loan processing department in Gibraltar's Irving Street office in San Francisco.

MRS. MARGOT FRASER of San Rafael will leave on Oct. 25 for a month's tour to Germany where she will attend an international sales conference at a factory in Bad Honnef am Rhine where the popular Birkenstock Footprint Sandals are made.

Mrs. Fraser and her partners, June and Howard Embury of San Rafael Health Foods, are exclusive U.S. distributors of Birkenstock Footprint Sandals.

EDWARD R. MIDDENDORF of Tiburon, agent for New York Life Insurance Co. in San Francisco, has been accepted as a qualified member of the Association for Advanced Life Underwriting.

Middendorf has been in the life insurance business for 11 years.

Oxidants, clean air.

Nitrogen dioxide, light air pollution.

Carbon monoxide, significant air pollution.

Smoke particles, significant air pollution.

Other areas:

San Francisco, heavy air pollution.

San Jose, heavy air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources but the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Dog's Bite Is Perfect Response

REDDING (UPI) — "It was the perfect response," remarked policeman Sam McCall after he was bitten on his left leg by a candidate for a job on the local police force.

"I was an intruder, it was at night and I was peeking in the window," McCall explained.

The job applicant was a burly German shepherd named Honcho. But the dog did not get the position. McCall said Honcho was too big for hopping in and out of police cars.

The first true self-adjusting color set ever

SYLVANIA GT-MATIC™

The all new Sylvania GT-Matic color tuning system sees the picture before you do and automatically adjusts the color for you. The GT-Matic memory controls are locked inside the set with a key.

But personal preferences vary. And your geographic location can affect color reception. That's why you get the key to the GT-Matic locked memory controls. Should you ever wish to reset the controls, just unlock the control center, set the controls to your preference and then lock them up with the key. The GT-Matic system will remember your color preference and work to maintain it from channel to channel, program to program. And the key keeps little fingers from playing with knobs they should leave alone.

Even Critics Hold Eventual Hope For BART System

OAKLAND (AP) — The nation's first space age mass transit system is turning out to be an insatiable money grabber plagued by million dollar goofs and glaring delays in the start of service.

But even the harshest critics of the year-old, $1.6 billion computer-operated Bay Area Rapid Transit System - BART - believe it will work eventually. Its designers maintain that BART has sparked a nationwide rapid transit boom in spite of its problems.

BART emerged after 20 turbulent years of planning. Its history is filled with time consuming and costly lawsuits, a strike and even gophers gnawing their way through some cable installations.

Its first year of operation has been equally turbulent.

There was a five-week strike and an accident which injured four people. It happened when the train was electronically ordered to speed up instead of slow down.

Nonetheless, BART compiled what one spokesman called "the best safety record in the country" and more than 5 million passengers rode in its carpeted, airplane-style cars.

Residents of three counties who approved a $792 million bond — the largest local bond issue in U.S. history — to finance BART have yet to ride the entire 75-mile length of the system. Their dreams of commuting between the metropolitan hubs of San Francisco and Oakland without facing the daily bumper-to-bumper traffic on the Bay Bridge are turning sour.

As BART begins its second year of operation, its sleek, silver trains are running only on the Oakland side of San Francisco Bay with three lines to suburban Richmond, Concord and Fremont.

Service on the San Francisco side is slated to begin Nov. 5 but the real heart of the system, a four-mile tunnel link under the bay, won't open for at least seven months and probably longer.

To complicate matters, BART also faces a reliability crisis: each week, about a third of the trains on the line must be taken out of service because of brake and door malfunctions, erratic speed control and loss of automatic power.

On top of that, more than half of BART's cars can't be put in service — many because they are undergoing modifications to fix such things as doors opening on the wrong side, or opening while the train is whizzing along at its maximum 80 miles per hour.

TRANSIT TRAIN — The trains of the Bay Area Rapid Transit System are sleek and modern looking. The problem is they don't run as good as they look.

BART estimates maintenance costs per car in the initial year of service at $8,000 — double the $4,000 budgeted. For BART's 200 cars, that adds up to $1.6 million.

At the outset, BART encountered a seven-month delay while it successfully fought a taxpayer suit against the bond issue.

By the time President Johnson officiated at groundbreaking in Concord on June 19, 1964, officials were predicting a mid-1968 opening.

But money and construction problems continued and a nine-week strike in 1971 at the Rohr Corp. plant in Southern California where the cars are built pushed back the opening even further.

The cost of BART has moved ahead relentlessly.

Finance Director William F. Goelz said the system's five-year operating deficit projected at $48 million in April has nearly doubled to between $86 million and $90 million.

President William Chester said Congress is the best bet to solve BART's money woes. If Congress and the state don't come up with enough money, he said he'd prefer new taxes to higher fares.

Goelz blames the huge deficit on a three-year labor contract signed in August that totaled $110 million and on a decision by BART directors not to consider increasing the maximum 60-cent fare. He wanrs the deficit may get bigger if transbay service is delayed again.

The block to transbay service is simple, according to state safety experts: BART's $37 million automated train control system built by Westinghouse Electric Corp. can't be trusted to keep trains from colliding.

As a result, the state Public Utilities Commission, which must certify the system's safety, ordered BART to begin using a human back-up to its automated system. Now trains may leave a station only after a platform supervisor has telephoned ahead to make sure the track is clear.

BART is investigating four alternatives, including one that would use mini-computers at every station instead of platform supervisors to keep trains separated.

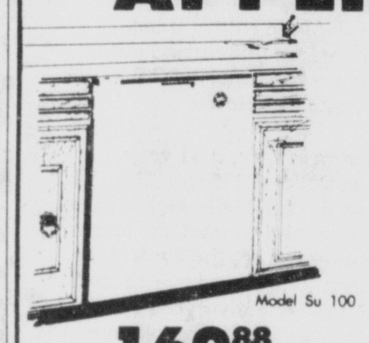

If the PUC approves the system, and the agency's operations supervisor, Ramon Gentry seems optimistic, transbay service could begin next spring.

But that service would be much slower than the 90-second headways in the completely automated system the public was promised.

BART officials and Westinghouse engineers admit to a lot of bugs, but contend that any completely new system is going to have more than the usual number of startup problems.

"Right now, a true transit renaissance is under way in this country and BART is the impetus for it," said General Manager B. R. Stokes. "We literally advanced technology half a century."
